No Mediterranean Roof
Coolidge Wants Airships
Too Many Dresses
When You Get It, Keep It

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1925, by Star Co.

SENATOR CIPPICO says Italy is the prisoner of England because Britain has the Mediterranean bottled up at Gibraltar and at the Suez Canal. He might have added that, in the same extent, Russia and Kemal Pasha, between them, have got the Mediterranean bottled up at the eastern end.

BUT THE DAYS have gone by when the Mediterranean or any other body of water can be bottled up. There is no roof on the Mediterranean; the Italians are daring fliers, and in Caproni they have some of the best flying machine makers in the world.

Ten Italian airships flying west could make a wreck of Gibraltar; another ten could fly east and wreck the entrance to the Suez Canal, and any British battleship that might be bottling up that strip of water.

BUT THE DAYS of "bottling up" have gone by and won't come back. The real ocean is the air; real empire is based on rule of the air.

That is why we ought to be having more flying machines.

IT IS EXTREMELY encouraging to read President Coolidge's letter to Howard E. Coffin, head of the National Air Transport of Detroit. The President urges development and "organized use of aircraft in every day commerce" as "highly desirable from the point of view of this government as a whole." The President adds:

"I would look with favor upon any sound effort which might be made with the commercial use of aircraft as its goal. My interest would be prompted, first, by my desire for national security, and second, by my wish for improved methods of transportation for purposes of commerce."

SINCE THE PRESIDENT is interested in commercial flying, commercial flying will boom in the United States.

The Standard Oil people, some of the great steel concerns, Sears, Roebuck and the packers, are ordering big flying machines.

THE BIGGEST CUSTOMER of commercial flying should be the United States postoffice, and probably it will be, since both the President and Postmaster New favor the utmost flying development.

The government ought to have thousands of machines covering the country in all directions. If the government will give the order, Henry Ford's son, Edsel, will build them.

To put this country ahead of all others in flying, the only thing needed is push.

MR. BROWNING, real estate man, having adopted one little girl, now adopts another little girl. She is said, officially, to be sixteen years old. Neighbors—perhaps they also wanted to be adopted—say she is twenty-one.

ANYHOW, MR. BROWNING, so newspapers say, sent the new little girl out to buy many new dresses for herself. He and she may think that means happiness. If so, they have something to learn about happiness.

Queen Elizabeth had a thousand dresses, but no bathtub. She would have been happier with one dress and one bathtub.

WHEN YOU GET a piece of this earth, KEEP it. It cannot be stolen; doesn't rust; you are your own board of directors; unlike watered stocks, there is only just SO MUCH of it, and it goes up in price.

The Indians sold Manhattan Island for $24. The land in Central Park alone is now worth a thousand millions.

MR. HATCH got 900 acres at Far Rockaway, under foreclosure, for $40,000; tried to get

MOVE TO UNITE ALL OFFICIALS IN FIGHT FOR CHEAP GASOLINE

The Special Commission on the Necessaries of Life today began a drive on the high cost of gasoline.

Notwithstanding a recent general cut of two cents a gallon, the commission believes the present retail price is excessive and that Massachusetts is a victim of discrimination.

In consequence, mayor and boards of selectmen in every city and town in the State were requested to forward opinions as to whether or not legislative action should be taken.

While no specific figure was given by the commission, other authorities believe that eighteen cents a gallon would afford a satisfactory profit to the wholesalers.

UNJUSTLY DISCRIMINATE.

"The commission believes," reads the letter sent town and city officials, "that the conditions which exist in regard to the retail distribution of gasoline unjustly discriminate against our citizens, impose an excessive financial burden on gasoline consumers, penalize small users and dealers, and restrict initiative and competition in the business by the threatened extermination of small dealers.

"The refusal or neglect of the oil industry to correct the price discrimination against Massachusetts and the continuance of wasteful and extravagant methods in the distribution of this commodity make it necessary to consider what action, if any, can be taken to insure fair and reasonable treatment to consumers of and dealers in gasoline in Massachusetts.

"Before making its annual report to the General Court, the Commission desires to receive your opinion as to whether or not legislative action affecting the price, quality or method of sale of gasoline in the

SAVE MOTHER AND 2 CHILDREN AT R. I. FIRE

Providence, R. I., Aug. 6.—Two children and their mother were rescued from the second floor of the tenement at Bowen and Water streets today, where they were trapped by smoke and flames.

Dgvonic Cruso, thirteen years old, leaped from a window and was saved from injury by Mrs. Seraphina Ieravalino, a neighbor, who broke his fall with her arms and body.

A younger boy, Charles, eleven years old, was dropped into Mrs. Ieravalino's arms by her husband, Michael Ieravalino, who mounted to the second-story window by ladder before firemen arrived.

Mrs. Clara Cruso, after standing by the window until her children were rescued dashed back to a bedroom and rummaged in a trunk for her lifetime's savings and would not leave, in spite of flames spreading, until firemen carried her out.

The fire started in a store on the first floor. A crowd of men, boys and girls helped themselves to shoes, stockings and other merchandise while the blaze was in progress. Damage was chiefly by smoke and water.

MINERS OPPOSED TO STRIKE, SAYS LEWIS

Atlantic City, Aug. 6 (I.N.S.).—The 158,000 hard coal miners of the United States do not want to strike September 1.

They want to stay at work and support the 400,000 dependent upon them.

The miners hoped they could reach an agreement with the operators. They haven't given up hope in spite of the crisis that has developed.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, made these statements in an exclusive interview with International News Service today.

"I regret," said Lewis, "that the wage negotiations with the oper-

New York, Aug. 6.—Mary Louise Browning, the "Cinderella" of real life, whose good fortune a whole nation is avidly discussing, "bulldozed" her parents into approving her adoption by multi-millionaire Edward W. Browning, according to Mrs. Mary Spas, mother of the girl.

SARGENT IN FIGHT; NEW HAMPSHIRE TO JOIN RATE BATTLE

The fight against the $8,460,000 increase in telephone rates was being waged on several fronts today.

In Boston the executive committee of the Mayors' Club of Massachusetts was meeting at Young's Hotel to consider plans for action toward nullifying the award.

In Manchester, N. H., the whole granite State was being organized to oppose the petition of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company for permission to increase its rate, which petition will come up for hearing next month.

At Washington, D. C., Corporation Counsel E. Mark Sullivan of Boston and his assistant, Samuel Silverman, were preparing to file a bill of complaint with the Department of Justice against the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, the parent of the New England, charging violation of the anti-trust laws.

MOTHER ONLY WINKS WHEN ASKED REAL AGE OF 'CINDERELLA' and today has a golden spoon in her mouth with every luxury that one can crave at her command, was four or five years older than she represented herself to be the state agent by the mother took on significant interest.

"What do you mean by bulldozing?" the mother was asked.

"Well," she replied, "Mary threatened to leave home, if she was not allowed to carry out her idea about the adoption. We did not want any scandal. Papa and I have worked hard all our lives to bring up our children and, at this late time in life, we don't want anything said against either them or ourselves.

WOULD LEAVE HOUSE.

"Mary is a good girl. She loved those things that we could not give her. When we pointed out to her that she had a good home here with us and that we loved her, she replied:

"Yes, I have a good home, but you haven't the millions Mr. Browning has.'"

Then it was called to Mrs. Spas' attention that if the girl was only sixteen and had threatened to leave home, measures could have been taken by her parents to prevent her.

To this Mrs. Spas asked:

"How old does a girl have to be before she can leave home and do as she pleases?"

"Twenty-one."

"Oh, no. I know it is eighteen. I looked into that."

"Is Mary over eighteen?"

Mrs. Spas hesitated, started to reply and winked. It was a knowing wink.

WILL NOT TELL AGE.

Mrs. Spas then declared that she had promised Mr. Browning that she would not tell Mary's age.

"What were the terms of the adoption?"

"I don't know. Mary told me what Mr. Browning was going to do for her. She said that she would have everything that she wanted and told me that she would be half ours and half Browning's.

"No, I did not read the papers drawn up for the adoption, but there was a clause somewhere, Mary said, that if Browning ever violated the agreement made by which he was to furnish her with clothing, chaperonas, finishing school and all the rest of those things, that the transaction was void.

"Mr. Browning assured me not to pay any attention to any outcry made over his adopting our Mary. He said that most of the talk was coming from enemies of his and that it would soon die down.

"He did, however, say that he did not want to have to ever call on us and left his telephone number where I could call him at any time of the day or night."

When asked if any financial settlement was made for the transaction, Mrs. Spas replied:

"Not one penny. It would look like we were selling our Mary.

"Our other daughter, Mildred, is in Colorado, suffering from pleurisy. Mr. Browning said that if we ever needed any money for her or ourselves just to call on him and he would give it to us.

"I am sure that everything will be all right. If it isn't, Mary promised to come home, and steps would then be taken for her protection."

But no sooner did she come into her good fortune than former neighbors began to gossip and raise the question:

"How old is Cinderella?"

Mary says she is sixteen, but the women in the neighborhood where she lived, assert in chorus that "she's twenty-one if she's a day."

Then they add that Mary was engaged to a dentist before Browning advertised for a girl to adopt, and they tell you further that numerous Romeos called on Mary in recent years.

And then to clinch their assertions they declare that the curls that now fall so gracefully around Mary's shoulders used to be done up in a far more mature fashion.

BROWNING UNDISTURBED.

"And that isn't all," one woman added. "She has played in the movies. She had a part with the Famous Players-Lasky."

But the gossip of Mary's former neighbors did not disturb Browning.

"Mary is just sixteen and delightfully childlike," he said, as Mary smiled approvingly.

Browning took Mary on their first shopping tour today. He declined to allow newspapers reporters to accompany them but promised to display the purchases later.

Mary first bought handkerchiefs. "I like handkerchiefs better than anything," she said. "I want blue ones and pink ones and some with flowers in them."

She bought them to her heart's desire. Then she selected forty dresses, costing $2,500. Browning had promised her that many the first day. She also bought twenty pair of silk hose and ten pair of shoes.

After that she and Browning called it a day and posed for pictures.

Boy's Hand Burned as Umbrella Touches Wire

As William Bacher, 12, of No. 278 Lamartine street, Jamaica Plain, with his umbrella over his head, was waiting on the platform of the Green street station to board a northbound "L" train, he suddenly felt a sharp pain in his right hand. He tried to release the handle of the umbrella from his grasp as the pain increased. Unable to do this, he danced and whirled about to the dismay of the many persons about him, before he was able to let go of the umbrella.

The lad was taken to the office of Dr. Morris Kaplan of No. 6 Glen road, Jamaica Plain, suffering from burns on his right hand. After treatment, he was sent home. The police report of the incident declared that the umbrella had come into contact with a live wire.

FIGHT ON HIGH COST OF GAS BEGINS HERE

Commission on Necessaries Open State-Wide Drive Upon Retail Prices

Commonwealth would be in the public interest.

"While the large marketing companies state they do not control retail prices, the Commission is informed by many retail dealers that they make their retail price to consumers the same as that set by the large companies. At this time last year the margin between the posted tank wagon price and the posted retail price of gasoline in Massachusetts was 2 cents a gallon; until yesterday it was 4 cents a gallon, when it was reduced to 3 cents a gallon.

NOT MAINTAINED TO ALL.

"These posted prices are apparently not maintained to all consumers and dealers. There is, consequently, a great deal of secret competition which is costly to the consumers who believe the posted price is the same to every one, and works hardship on dealers who receive only the posted margin as against those who obtain a much larger margin."

The latter points out in some cases retailers who have reduced the price of gas have had difficulty in obtaining a supply, while others operating with loaned equipment, have been told that unless they maintained the posted retail price their equipment would be removed.

SOLD FOR LESS.

For some tim epast independent dealers have been selling gasoline for from two to four cents below the posted retail price. This was particularly true along the North and South Shores, where standard brands of gas could be purchased for 22 and 24 cents, when they were selling in Greater Boston for 26 cents. Certain of the retailers even cut their prices below that figure, automobile dealers, for instance, selling gas to favored customers at 18 cents a gallon.

They were able to make a profit at this figure, even though their gross business was small compared to that of the big distributors.

As a result of this price war the big dealers were forced to cut two cents yesterday; but further slashing is desired.

There is only one way to bring this about.

at the request of W. Jennings Paton of counsel for Mrs. Blankenburg.

"The defendant and her counsel ought to clearly understand," said Judge Prest, "that in the charge of perjury is also involved a charge of obstructing the administration of justice in this court.

"The first specification furnished the defendant clearly informed of that, but lest there should be any mistake and in order that no element of surprise may be claimed, I say now that when the hearing takes place on Monday morning, you shall also meet for the defendant the charge of obstructing justice for the reason the defendant knowingly and corruptly came into court with a wholly fictitious and fraudulent claim of kinship and supported that claim by giving perjured testimony not only on one occasion but on many."

Attorney Patron asked for a further continuance on the ground of the "momentous importance" of the matter.

Assistant Attorney General Weston said it should be understood this would be a final continuance. Judge Prest said an extraordinary reason would be necessary to obtain a further delay.

CHIEF RETURNS TO COHASSET, IN COLLAPSE

Cohasset, Aug. 6.—Police Chief William H. McArthur, who returned in a state of collapse after wandering aimlessly in the woods near Easton for thirty-six hours following his mysterious disappearance Monday morning, is in a serious condition at his home here.

Physicians after an examination of the police chief declared that he probably suffered an attack of asphasia resulting from overwork.

Chief McArthur, unkempt and bedraggled in appearance after his harrowing experience, told the story of his strange wanderings, to members of his family and physicians.

He said that he went to the home of his halfbrother, George Bowles, in South Easton, last Monday morning.

Monday evening the chief said he started to walk to Brockton to make train connections for Cohasset.

Reaching a clump of woods near South Easton, he was overcome with fatigue, fell to the ground, and became unconscious. Late at night he awakened and continued his tramp toward Brockton. He drifted aimlessly about for hours finally falling asleep again.

When he awakened Tuesday he walked through the woods throughout the entire day.

Early Wednesday morning, the chief said, he reached Brockton, took a train for Braintree where he connected with the late train for this town, arriving about 11 p. m.

ators were unsuccessful. However, no other result could be expected when representatives of the operators entered the conference under iron-clad instructions to concede nothing whatever to the miners.

"We had hoped the conference would reach an agreement. We still want an agreement so that the miners may continue to operate and our men be steadily employed."

Yet while Lewis was making this statement preparations were going forward for the strike. Forty members of the union's general scale committee met at the Ambassador Hotel and authorized Lewis and other high union officials to issue a strike order, effective September 1, in the event no agreement can be reached.

"The miners," Lewis continued, "must get a decent living wage. Idleness means a total loss to them. That is why we want a contract that will keep them employed.

"They earn an average of less than $1,700 a year. Where in the American citizen who will say that $1,700 a year is too much to pay for the miner who risks his life far under ground among the terrific dangers of the coal mine!"

CHURCH TIFF HALTS SAYLES NUPTIALS

4500-MILE TRIP AS BRIDESMAID IN VAIN

Nancy Dyer, Providence society girl, whose trip home from Italy to be bridesmaid for Nancy Sayles is in vain, her chum's wedding to Lieut. Becci of the Italian cabinet having been postponed indefinitely.

'400' GASPS AT SAYLES 'BREAK'

Noted Italian Fiance Ill at Sea and Bridesmaids on Way, but Wedding Is Off

Providence, Aug. 6.—Differences in religion, it is believed, have caused the indefinite postponement of the marriage of Nancy Sayles, wealthy Pawtucket heiress, and Lieutenant Ernesto Lardinelli Becci, Under-Secretary of the Interior in the Italian Cabinet.

Rhode Island society was amazed when news of the break in the wedding plans was first announced by an Italian barber who was to have acted as interpreter and valet for Lieutenant Becci.

Then Mrs. Frank A. Sayles, mother of Nancy, wrote from New York admitting that the ceremony would be postponed, but giving no reason for the decision.

SOCIETY WONDERS.

Lieutenant Becci is a Catholic and Miss Sayless is a Protestant. Miss Sayles' fiance is reported as being ill aboard a steamship en route to this country.

Rhode Island society leaders are wondering today whether the religious controversy which preceded the recent Church-Vanderbilt wedding at Newport prompted the sudden shift in the plans for the Sayles-Becci nuptials.

Some believed that Lieutenant Becci's illness may have led to the postponement.

The couple were to have been married by two Catholic priests next Wednesday at "Saleholm," the Sayles show place in East avenue, Pawtucket.

BRIDESMAID ON WAY.

Though it was to have been a comparatively simple affair, the wedding was regarded as the most important event on the Rhode Island social calendar this Summer.

Miss Sayles was to have had only one attendant, Miss Nancy Dyer, daughter of Anthony Dyer of this city, who with her father is due in New York, Saturday, aboard the steamship Rotterdam. The Dyers have been touring in Italy and Miss Nancy was returning specially at this time to be the attendant at the wedding of her friend.

In planning for the wedding it had been necessary for Lieut. Becci to obtain a waiver from the King of Italy of the requirement of that country that a national marrying in a foreign land must live in that country six months before the marriage.

VILLA FOR GIFT.

As a wedding gift Mrs. Sayles is said to have purchased a villa in the environs of Rome, where her daughter and her prospective husband were to have lived. A place near Rome was selected because of an expressed desire of Miss Sayles to live near that city.

The romance betwen Miss Sayles and Lieut. Becci, which culminated in the announcement of their intended marriage, began in Rome last Winter, while Mrs. Sayles and her daughter were spending part of a European tour there. Invitations to the wedding were sent out July 6.

BOLIVIA AND ARGENTINA ARE LINKED BY RAILROAD

Washington, Aug. 6 (A.P.)—Recent completion of a 124-mile railroad line connecting Bolivia and Argentina was hailed in a statement today by the National Geographic Society as bringing "the long cherished dream of uniting the republics of North and South America with bonds of steel another step nearer realization." In addition to providing a new outlet for Bolivia, which has no sea coast, the society said the new line, lying entirely between altitudes of 9,500 and 14,000, connects with the railway systems of Argentina at its Southern terminal and through them, with the lines of Uruguay and Brazil.

DEATH DIVIDES OLD VAUDEVILLE TEAM

Los Angeles, Aug. 6 (A.P.).—The theatrical team of Courtwright & Lee was divided by the death of Jenny Lee, aged seventy-five. Miss Lee, known as an emotional actress, played with Jefferson and Booth and with her husband, William Courtright, starred in dramatic sketches in the early days of vaudeville. In recent years the couple had been doing character work in motion pictures.

ACCUSED YOUTH IS REAL FAN

Counsel Plans Fight for His Freedom When He Faces Court Tuesday

Manchester, N. H., Aug. 6.—Charlie Lefebvre, fifteen-year-old boy accused by Louis Labombard of participating with him in the slaying of the aged Gillis sisters at Hudson, is taking calmly his confinement to the State Industrial School here.

According to Superintendent Vernon Backus, Charles eats and sleeps well and acts no differently than the 114 other boys. Since entering the institution, where he is held waiting a hearing Tuesday in Nashua court, the boy has become a radio fan.

As he is not committed to the institution, he has considerable time on his hands, which he devotes largely to tuning in on various broadcasting stations.

IS RADIO FAN.

He displays considerable proficiency in getting the stations, although he has not as yet mastered the intricate details of tubes and other paraphanalia.

At the hearing on Tuesday, if the boy is held as a "probable cause murderer," he will return to the school as a regular inmate while awaiting trial.

Young LeFebvre's attorney, Timothy F. O'Connor, intends to force the State to lay all its cards on the table at the hearing before Judge Frank B. Clancy, which will be private.

The lawyer will refuse to waive a full hearing in the lower court as is customary, thereby putting the State in the position of having to show cause why the boy should be held.

LABOMBARD TWICE AT HOUSE

Louis Labombard was twice at the home of his girl friend, Claire Aubut of Nashua, on the day he declares he participated in the cruel murder of the aged Gillis sisters. So declares Mrs. Ida Aubut, who backs up her daughter's story that Louis is not capable of having committed the crime in spite of his confession. Mrs. Aubut asserts that he acted perfectly natural on the day of the murder.

"I don't think he would harm a kitten and our friends who know Louis say the same," said Mrs. Aubut.

"He came here every day after he left the tiny Angora kitten at our house, and on the Wednesday that the Gillis sisters were killed, he was here twice.

"He used to drop in while going to and from the asbestos plant, looking for a job. That day as usual he stayed until my boys came home for dinner, and that would be about five minutes past twelve.

"Then he went out, but whether he went right away or not I cannot say. Some days he used to go right away, perhaps returning later to say he had eaten lunch down town. Other days he would sit outside for a long time playing with the kitten.

BACK IN AFTERNOON.

"He was back again in the afternoon and he started away once, only to return when his bicycle broke down just a little way from our house. Later it rained hard and there was lightning over the woods and we sat together on the back porch watching it. It rained twice that day, late in the afternoon and then again after supper. Louis left after the first storm.

"He certainly didn't act nervous that we noticed. The next day was Thursday, and I remember that we heard about the murder before he came. When he did come over he said:

"Whoever killed those old maids is a terror. I don't see what anybody would want to do that for. They are as gentle as kittens."

JURY DODGERS CALLED "SLACKERS" AND FINED

New York, Aug. 6 (A.P.).—Characterizing citizens who fail to respond to jury summons as "slackers," Judge Mancuso, in General Sessions, ordered collections of fines of $250 each for three of the ten August grand jury panelmen who failed to appear last Monday, accepted excuses of the other seven and refused to excuse six more who wanted to go to Europe this month.

JAILED BOY 'LISTENS IN' ON NEW WORLD

Charlie Lefebvre.

MISSING BOYS FOUND HIDING IN CAVE

The left-handed type of grown-up courage that puts the shivering fear of a cop into a kid and impresses upon a youngster that everything he does is bad, sent two Mattapan boys into a Blue Hill cave, where they remained hidden for two days.

It took another youngster, one who discounts such thoughtless threats, to dig his chums out of hiding, for George Ross of No. 76 Clifton street put on his "Old Sleuth" garb and led his personal posse of one into the black woods to the rescue.

It turned out that a stranger's threat to put nine-year-old Walter Scott and thirteen-year-old Anthony Robshaw in the police station until they were twenty-one, was a mere idle boast, so Walter and Anthony returned to their homes in Clifton street.

Blanched of face with the fear of the law, young Scott and Robshaw made up a batch of ragged sandwiches, and with an old ironing board went to the wooded and snake-infested hills beyond Mattapan.

The threat to jail them had been made, and they saw but one way to escape such a horrible fate—flight.

Tuesday night came, and Clifton street was lacking two little boys. The police then really did get the case, but the police are busy and grown-up and it's a long ways back to their own boyhood, so they gave no thought to black caves and the sighing of wind in the trees.

Wednesday night came and the fugitives were still missing, but Georgie Ross, in the role of "Old Sleuth," took the trail alone, and a smart trail it was, too, because you see Georgie is only a kid himself and he knows the way a kid works and thinks.

Georgie found his chums hiding in the cave. The entrance was barred against bears and wolves by the ironing board.

The store of sandwiches was depleted.

Georgie's cynical arguments against grownup threats and the ultimate proof of their shallowness didn't quite hit the mark, however, so Georgie was compelled to report his find to his chums' parents, and the boys were brought home.

TO LEARN MATHEMATICS BY BABE RUTH'S BATTING

Chicago, Aug. 6.—Chicago school children will study mathematics to the tune of figuring Babe Ruth's batting average rather than work ing theoretical problems.

Superintendent William McAndrew gave a sample problem.

"Find the percentage of games won by your favorite ball team in a given number of games lost and won and the batting average of Babe Ruth, to be computed from a table of strikes and balls.

"That will interest children more," he said, "than the old fashioned problems."

BAY STATE MAYORS CONFER TODAY IN PHONE RATE FIGHT

The greatest interest of the moment centered in the meeting of the mayors' committee. The special meeting was called by Mayor Hodgett of Woburn, president of the club, at the request of Mayor Curley, who is a member of the committee, and who was to present plans for a definite line of action.

Included in the plans was another appeal in the wake of that made by Corporation Counsel Sullivan to the Interstate Commerce Commission to investigate the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Warned by the action of the Public Utilities Commission of the Bay State, the public-spirited citizens of New Hampshire have resolved to lose no time in preparing their defense against the efforts of the telephone company expects to open next month before the Public Service Commission of the Granite State.

Chairman Adolph Wagner, of a special aldermanic committee is leading the fight on behalf of the city of Manchester.

City Clerk Arthur W. Phinney of that city was drawing up today communications addressed to the ten city governments of the State asking them to appoint committees and join with Manchester in the move to oppose the proposed increase in rates.

The Governor and his council will be asked to instruct the attorney general to represent the State at a hearing before the Public Service Commission and register official protest of the State.

Justice Department to Get Telephone Facts

Washington, Aug. 6.—In support of their contention that the American Telephone & Telegraph Company is operating in defiance of the anti-Trust laws, Corporation Counsel Clark Sullivan of Boston and his assistant, Samuel Silverman, were joined by Assistant Attorney-General William J. Donovan to file a bill of complaint with the Department of Justice enumerating their charges against the parent company of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company.

Assistant Attorney-General Donovan is directly in charge of all investigations and prosecutions of alleged offenses against the Clayton act and the Sherman anti-trust laws.

In their argument before the assistant attorney-general, Corporation Counsel Sullivan established to his satisfaction the fact that the control exercised at present by the American Telephone & Telegraph Company as licensor over it's licensee, the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company, was analogous at every point with that formerly practised by the United Shoe Machinery Company over its licensees and which practice was, several years ago, declared illegal by the United States Supreme Court.

OPENING WEDGE.

This request from the assistant attorney-general, together with that expressed by Chief Counsel P. J. Farrell of the Interstate Commerce Commission that the Boston counsel, representing their own municipality and those of 169 others in Massachusetts, proceed immediately to file their several complaints against the recent raises in telephone rates in the Bay State, initiates what promises to be one of the most important and far-reaching fights between a public service corporation and its patrons that Washington has been called upon to abdicate for many years.

Having successfully enlisted the aid of the Interstate Commerce Commission and that of the department of justice, the representatives of the plaintiffs against the New England Telephone Company now present in the national capital, at one and the same time insert the opening wedge in a question both State and National.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has, according to Commissioner Meyer's opinion, jurisdiction over toll rates and these affect in great part telephone messages originating in Massachusetts.

LIKE OTHER CASE.

In establishing the analogy between the former relationship existing between the United Shoe Machinery Company and its licensees, declared illegal by the United States Supreme Court, and that of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company with its licensee, the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company, Corporation Counsel Sullivan asserted that the New England company, although paying the American Telephone and Telegraph Company full rates for its operating equipment, does not receive title to such equipment and her relationships with the parent organization to "have perpetual use" of the equipment so issued.

This latter phase of the relationship of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company with its subsidiary, or licensee, the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company, has a direct bearing on all such similar relationships with the parent and subsidiary companies throughout the country and, may, if the department of justice sees fit, become the basis of a wholesale investigation of the practices of the American Telegraph and Telephone Company wherever it controls a local or subsidiary company.

ASK OTHER MAYORS

Thus encouraged in their fight against the rate increase in Massachusetts recently allowed the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company by the Massachusetts Public Utilities Commission, Corporation Counsel Sullivan and Silverman left here en route to Philadelphia and New York to enlist the aid of the mayors of those cities to support the fight initiated by the city of Boston and its 169 co-combatants against the "illegal and unreasonable" practises of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company as exemplified by its petitions for rate increases brought through its local and subsidiary telephone organizations.

'Tea Party' Spirit in Phone War

If there were any of the Boston Tea Party spirit left, the people of Boston and Massachusetts would not submit so tamely to the $8,460,000 bonus just awarded the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company.

That seems to be the spirit of the letters of protest against the recent phone rate award pouring into the Boston Evening American office.

You will find some of them below. What is YOUR reaction? Write in, to the Boston Evening American.

Here are some of the letters received:

Editor, Boston Evening American:

If only there were enough spirit left in the down-trodden American people to stage another Boston Tea Party!

That is what is needed. We have at last reached the peak of extortion. Militant action is wanted. If only we had spunk enough (like the Fathers) to tear the instruments out and throw them into the street! And brains enough to call upon the city or State to put in new ones and give us decent service.

WILLIAM A. RYAN.

No. 5f Linden street, Dorchester.

Editor, Boston Evening American:

It is gratifying to see the fight that your paper is making on the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company for committing highway robbery in the day time. We are getting less for our money in Boston than any other city in the land. The service is really terrible.

Let them stop leakages elsewhere. This is the time to stop this inflation. We were just getting back to normal when this earthquake came along. I believe many people are going to do with telephones what the patriots did with the English tea. May you triumph in this fight as you have in so many others.

DR. HENRY M. LANDESMAN,
No. 151 Warren street, Roxbury.

Editor, Boston Evening American:
Shall the Public Utilities Commission should allow the telephone people to raid the pockets of the people is an outrage. More power to the Boston Evening American. Where are the other papers in this fight? Why doesn't the Governor fire the commissioners?

JOSEF J. HOBAN,
Webster avenue, Somerville.

Editor, Boston Evening American:

To your paper goes all the credit for starting this campaign. May you have the credit of ending it, the right way, with a victory for the people. The only excuse they have is to raise the salaries of persons already paid too much. The men and girls who work don't get it. If the people could only be united, they would win.

M. C. WALTERS.

No. 44 Carroll street, Chelsea.

Editor, Boston Evening American:

The State departments were consolidated in 1919 for the very purpose of putting men on commissions who would give everything to the veiled interests. Good men were shoved out in the cold. This present Department of Public Utilities has no use for the people at large. The telephone company is going backward, not forward. No raise in rates should be allowed.

J. D. DICKINSON.

No. 84 Jackson avenue, Everett.

Operators Get $1.08 Raise; Moguls Get Nearly 50 P. C.

While the telephone lords were wallowing in an orgy of salary-boosting to the tune of a 44.67 per cent. increase in three years, the telephone operators, whose maximum pay is $22, received but a paltry five per cent. increase, which represented the munificent total of $1.08. The operators toil eight hours a day. Many of them are the sole support of families and they are often obliged to do the work of two and three girls on a switchboard.

3 LAFAYETTE FLIERS DOWN IN FRANCE

American Airmen, Bound for Morocco, Meet With Mishaps

Paris, Aug. 6 (A.P.).—The squadron of seven airplanes, officered by that number of American aviators, volunteers for service with the French in Morocco, is having a difficult time getting really started on its journey to the front. Only four of the machines were proceeding today over Southern France, three of the squadron already having met with mishaps.

The plane captained by Arthur Holden was left at the post when the squadron started from the airdrome of Le Bourget, near Paris, yesterday; Captain W. Graham Bullen, of Miami, Fla., was left behind at Lyons because of a broken propeller on his machine, and Austen Parker, of Helena, Mont., is at Villacoublay, an aviation field in the Paris district, his plane having struck bad weather which obliged him to land for the night.

The four other machines of the squadron landed safely at Lyons and took off from there this forenoon, heading for Barcelona, which they were expected to reach during the day.

ARE ANY SECRET BRIDES IN YOUR HOME?

Plenty of Young Couples Are "Springing" Marriages on Folks

Have you a little secret bride in your home?

You answer, No, No," but are you sure?

Pretty Mary or Sue or Lily or Gert, may be tripping blithely along to school or office each day or they may be swimming or golfing motoring, with not a single mysterious "something" locked in their hearts.

But—

Don't express too much surprise if one of your darling daughters, or sisters, or cousins suddenly "let the cat out of the bag" with the announcements that they've been married for ever so long.

It's in the air these days.

It's now the open season for secret brides.

They can't resist the impulse to "tell the folks all about it."

Take this pretty little secret romance as an example: Charming Catherine Louise Sherburne has just summoned courange to tell "Dad" and "Momsie" who are Mr. and Mrs. Mary W. Sherburne of No. 47 Bartlett street, Malden, that she's been married for weeks to Chester W. Arey of No. 87 Cedar street.

They hied themselves away to Nashua, N. H., where the Rev. Lawrence Noyes, a retired minister, made them man and wife.

They kept their marriage secret for a week, each returning to the homes of their respective parents. Yesterday they broke the news.

Tears, smiles, hugging, kissing and handclasps.

PERMITS MAY BE REFUSED TO BUSES

New York, Aug. 6 (A. P.)—At a meeting of commuters from Westchester County, Long Island, Connecticut and New Jersey plans were laid for a country attack against the New Haven railroad for increasing commutation fares, by seeking to have Westchester towns refuse to grant franchises for a contemplated series of bus routes acting as feeder lines to the New York, Westchester and Boston railroad, which the New Haven controls.

The tentative bus corporation sponsored by the New Haven and to be capitalized at $1,000,000 could not function without franchises from the main Westchester County towns affected by the increased fares.

Inauguration of a legal battle in Connecticut to restrain the 20 per cent. increase in commutation fares which went into effet there with the 40 per cent. increase in New York, was discussed at the meeting.

The commuters organization chose the name of the Metropolitan Commuters Association. A committee was appointed by Charles A. Van Auken, corporation counsel of New Rochelle, who presided, to draft the constitution and to investigate ways and means of raising funds.

York Beach, Me., Aug. 6.—A commercial airplane piloted by Herbert W. Shebab of New York, with Langer Garnall, mechanic, also of New York, aboard, developed engine trouble when flying over Long Beach, and was forced down in the water.

INDICT SECRETARY TO PREVENT WILL PROBATE

Denver, Col., Aug. 6 (A.P.)—Henrietta Wilcox, secretary of the Colorado Commission for the Blind, in an action filed in county court was charged with "wrongfully administering drugs, nostrums and intoxicants" to James S. Hoy, Colorado and Wyoming pioneer, who died here May 21 last.

The action was filed by attorneys representing the dead man's brother, Ades A. Hoy of St. Louis, at whose request the body was exhumed last week. Emily S. Washington, Aug. 6—The Old Testament may be open to question on a literal interpretation of its account of the Creation of the World, but as a military textbook it teaches sound principles.

Port Henry, N. Y., Aug. 6 (A. P.).—Traffic on the Champlain Division of the Delaware & Hudson Railroad was blocked by a washout near Burdick's Siding, south of here.

Provincetown Men Land 518-Pound Swordfish

New Bedford, Aug. 6.—The Provincetown sloop Liberty arrived with ten swordfish, one of which, weighing 518 pounds, is the largest landed here this season. It gave two of the Liberty's crew, Manuel Remendo and Michael Diegô, a seven-hour battle before they drowned it out.

BANDIT IS KILLED IN NEW YORK FIGHT

New York, Aug. 6.—One bandit was shot to death and two others seriously wounded by police bullets in an exciting chase through the streets.

The three bandits had just held up fourteen dice players, stripped them of jewelry, money and clothing, leaving them naked so they could not follow the fleeing robbers.

Policemen, attracted by the cries of the fleeced gamblers, gave chase.

NEW FIN. COM. HEAD TO QUIT LEGISLATURE

No sooned had Mayor Curley expressed the hope that Charles L. Carr would resign from the Legislature upon his appointment to the head of the Finance Commission than Mr. Carr came out with a statement in which he stated his intention of doing that very thing as soon as his appointment was confirmed.

Mayor Curley said he was prompted to beconise of the Finance Commission "custom" of criticizing for drawing two salaries. Mr. Carr, he pointed out, would be doing the same thing on a much larger scale. The new head of the Finance Commission is a Republican, the first of that party to hold the position since it was started. His salary will be $6,000 a year.

MAIL AIRPLANE HITS TREE AND FALLS IN RIVER

Bloomsburg, Pa., Aug. 6 (A.P.).—An eastbound mail plane piloted by Harry A. Chandler of New Brunswick, N. J., crashed here. Chandler is in a serious condition at the Bloomsburg Hospital with a fractured skull. The cargo of mail fell into the Susequehanna River and has not been recovered. The plane was demolished.

Fourteen bags of mail were found in the waters of the river. The number carried by the machine is not known.

Chandler was en route from New York to the Bellefonte (Pa.) field. He had lost his bearings in the dense fog and had landed in a field of oats. Learning his position from campers he attempted to rise again, but struck a tree on the river bank and was catapulted into the stream.

He was pinned beneath the plane in four feet of water, with only his head above the surface. The campers, who were nearby, extricated him, cutting away parts of the plane.

Long Tresses Beat Short in Chicago Beauty Contest

Chicago, Aug. 6.—The battle lines have been drawn in Chicago between long and short hair for its beauties.

With the award of the first three to girls with long tresses, the opinion of the sheiks who cheered on the sidelines was voiced in favor of the latter.

Miss Marguerite Gonzales' who won the distinction of representing Chicago in the Atlantic City pageant, has long curls.

"It's more trouble to have long hair than bobbed. Fifty good strokes with a heavy comb at night keep it soft and beautiful." And Miss Gonzales' mother has her hair bobbed.

ATTORNEY SURE MILLER CAN BE CLEARED

By JOHN A. KENNEDY

(Copyrig. 1925, By Universal Service)

Washington, Aug. 6.—Leland B. Duer, lawyer, of Broadway, New York, omits he handled some of the $4700 in Liberty Bonds traced into the possession of Colonel Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian, from the $6,613,-979.97 seots in the American Metals case.

Because of his status as attorney for Colnel Miller in this matter Mr. Duer will not talk for publication other than to verify this one fact.

He explains that he has made a report of his activities to the Department of Justice. He has told its agents he had no part in the actual settlement of the American Metals claim.

He hints that his position was somewhat similar to that of Major Vincent Carroll, Philadelphia lawyer, who exchanged a batch of Liberty Bonds figuring in the case for bonds of smaller denomination which later were traced into Miller's possession.

Both men were associated with Colonel Miller overseas. Both are lawyers who handled cases before the alien property custodian. Each insists his activities in this case are merely private transactions handled for clients.

Mr. Duer insists that Colonel Miller's part in the transaction can be aired without the slightest reflection on the honesty and integrity of the former alien property custodian.

"I have every confidence that Colonel Miller's possession of these bonds can be fully explained," Duer told Universal Service. "My relations with him as a soldier, as a friend and in his office as alien property custodian make me positive that, insofar as he was concerned there was nothing irregular about this case."

INJUNCTION REMOVAL OF OFFICIALS MAY FOLLOW

Philadelphia, Aug. 6 (A.P.).—Further developments, with the possibility of request for injunctions from the courts, were awaited today as the result of Governor Pinchot's action yesterday in summarily removing Public Service Commissioner S. Ray Shelby and the refusal of Shelby and Commissioner James S. Benn, ousted last Thursday to quit notwithstanding the executive order.

CITY OWNERSHIP PLAN TO CUT PRICE OF LIGHT

When the Boston Evening American compelled the Edison Company to lower lighting rates, it accomplished something bigger than merely saving the customers of that company money.

It brought to a head the sentiment in favor of public ownership and caused the Boston City Council to take the first step in the direction of a municipal lighting plant owned and operated by the people.

A resolution in favor of municipal ownership of an electric lighting plant and current will be presented at the Aug. 24 meeting of the City Council.

It is being drawn up by Assistant Corporatio Counsel Joseph P. Lyons.

ADOPTED UNANIMOUSLY.

The order instructing the acting law officer to prepare the resolution wa sadopted unanimously by the City Council, with Councillor Lane absent. Those voting in favor were Councillors Brickley, Donoghue, Gilbody, Healey, Moriarty, Purcell, Walsh and Watson.

Watson and President Moriarty sponsored the order and made the fight for it in committee.

"Public sentiment is with us for public ownership," said Councillor Watson.

"The Boston Evening American will compell any candidate for mayor to announce his stand in this matter."

Mr. Watson outlined his plan. If the resolution is passed, he said, it will have to be passed by the next City Council, too, and that by a two-thirds vote. Then it would go to the people for their approval.

ASK COMPANY TO SELL.

In the event of approval of public ownership i nthe referendum, the next step would be to ask the Edison company to sell its plant.

"In case the company wouldn't sell," he said, "we would have to go ahead and build our own plant. Even in the face of the opposition of the opposition of the Edison interests."

During the discussion in executive committee, Councillor Donoghue suggested an immediate break with the Edison company.

"And leave our streets in darkness?" asked another councillor.

"Let them try it," said Mr. Donoghue.

"The public wouldn't stand for it," said Mr. Watson.

N. S. MINERS TO ACCEPT GOVERNMENT'S PROPOSAL

Halifax, N. S., Aug. 6 (I.N.S.).—Miners in the Beaco coal fields have voted by a majority of 1,133 to accept the government's proposal to end the strike which has been under way for five months.

Directors of the corporation, meeting in Montreal, will make known their decision on the peace proposal tomorrow.

45 KLAN TRAINS HEADING FOR CAPITAL

Washington, Aug. 6 (A.P.).—Railroad and other preparations were going forward in the capital today for the prospective arrival of upwards of fifty thousand visitors for the Ku Klux Klan demonstration here Saturday, when klansmen will parade up Pennsania avenue.

Forty-five special trains, to bring the influx from as far as Buffalo, N. Y.; Columbus, Ohio, and Jacksonville, Fla., already have been chartered for the occasion, and one railroad has had to refuse other applications for trains, replying that all available equipment has been assigned.

Local klan officials have informed the police that a great majority of the visitors will be the families of klansmen, who will return home with them on the specials Saturday night. Their latest estimate is that not more than 10,000 will march in the parade, although when they first applied for the parade permit they indicated the number would be near-er 100,000.

In addition to the special trains, automobile caravans are bringing other hundreds, with seven of the motor trains understood to be en route from Texas alone. Police have made arrangements for parking of hundreds of cars in a suburban section.

National headquarters of the klan has addressed a letter to local organizations asking the co-operation of participants in making the demonstration an example of orderliness and Acting Police Superintendent Evans says he expects nothing else.

"But we expect to be prepared," he added, in explaining an order of the department for the full police force to be on reserve duty for the twenty-four hours beginning at 8 a. m. Saturday.

After the parade plans called for burning a "fiery cross" near the Washington Monument. It is now understood, however, this feature will be transferred to a site facing Washington across the Potomac.

PUBLICITY BACK OF PICKFORD KIDNAPING

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 6 (A.P.).—Further testimony in support of the defense contention that the whole Mary Pickford kidnaping case was nothing but a publicity scheme was ready for presentation at today's session of the trial of Charles H. Stephens, Claude Hoskins and Adrian Wood, on charges of plotting to carry off the film star and hold her for $200,000 ransom.

In outlining its publicity plot attack in an opening statement, however, the defense admits it clear that Mary Pickford was not involved as a publicity plotter.

The man who plotted for prominent mention in the news of the day, counsel explained, were George K. Home, former chief of detectives in the Los Angeles police department, and Harry Raymond, a private detective, who planned the kidnaping case "for the purpose of reflecting glory on themselves," and selected Mary Pickford because of the publicity value of her name.

The defendant Stephens was the first witness called by the defense. He testified that Louis Geck, later identified as a police informer, had repeatedly outlined to him schemes involving the kidnaping of motion picture stars or children of nationally known persons. Geck kept after him for two years, he said, and led him to the Pickford studio on the day he was arrested there.

The courtroom was electrified when B. S. Hahn of the defence counsel put two members of the city detective force on the stand and compelled them to read from a ledger of several sums paid to Louis Geck through Captain of Detectives George Home, ranging in value from $25 to $40.

SIX MEN IN TOMBS HOLD 'LIQUOR ORGY'

New York, Aug. 6.—(I.N.S.).—Investigation was begun into an alleged liquor orgy in the Tombs prison, which resulted in six men being rushed to Bellevue hospital, two of whom may die.

The men had been sentenced on disorderly conduct charges. They were found writhing on their cell floors intoxicated.

Physicians said the men were suffering from acute alcoholism. They were pronounced "legally sober" when sentenced. Warden Peter Mallon denied the men obtained liquor in prison.

OFFICIALS QUIT RATHER THAN CUT WAGES

Three Resign Bethlehem Steel Posts, and Their Places Will Not Be Filled

New York, Aug. 6 (A. P.).—Need for drastic economy with the alternative of cutting the wages of 10,000 workers is given as the reason for the resignation of three high officials of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

The officials, whose resignations were announced to take effect September 1, are: Archibald Johnston, close associate of Charles M. Schwab. H. S. Snyder, vice president in charge of finances, and William M. Tobias, general manager.

The duties of these officers will be distributed among other executives.

WOMAN HANGED AS SLAYER IN IRELAND

Dublin, Aug. 6 (A.P.).—A rare event in Ireland—the execution of a woman—took place in Mountjoy Prison, when Anne Walsh and Michael Talbot were put to death for the murder of the husband of Mrs. Walsh at Limerick. Talbot was a relative of the victim.

Old Football Star Lays 36,000 Bricks in One Day

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 6 (A.P.).—Laying 36,000 bricks a day, or approximately three and one-half carloads, James Brown, an Indian and former Carlisle football player, has gained a reputation among workers on a highway near here as the world's champion bricklayer.

So fast does he work that five men are kept busy keeping him supplied with brick and two others are used to keep the face of the road even ahead of him. He receives $2 an hour, or $16 a day.

Society Big Wigs to Honor Dr. Rice

(International News Reel Photo.)

Miss Natalie Hammond, daughter of the John Hays Hammonds of Gloucester, frequently plays the youthful hostess role at "Lookout Hill," a show place of the shore.

Betty Alden

SOCIETY BIG WIGS AND NOTABLES OF LITERARY AND scientific fields all consorted at luncheon yesterday within the confines of the Newport Casino to do honor to Dr. Alexander Hamilton Rice of Boston and New York, just returned to the United States from his latest explorations into South American jungles.

MRS. RICE (formerly Mrs. George Widener) shared honors with her distinguished husband, for she, too, has journeyed into far places, an intrepid traveler to civilization's outposts in search of adventure. Mrs. John Nicholas Brown, Mrs. Hamilton Fish Webster and Miss Edith Wetmore were three Newport personages arranging details.

PRESIDENT A. LAWRENCE Lowell of Harvard University went down specially for the luncheon. William F. Whitehouse was toastmaster, and Admiral William S. Sims had general supervision of the affair, one of the high lights of the season at the Rhode Island society stronghold.

BOTH DR. RICE and his handsome spouse are frequently seen on Bellevue Avenue, at the Casino and Bailly's Beach. Mrs. Rice sets off her delicate type of good looks with the most becoming frocks and hats, usually of pastels. For a recent Bailey's Beach appearance she wore an ensemble of mauve with wide hat.

LATE AUGUST and early September will see many Bostonians now roaming about Europe turning their steps homeward. Mr. and Mrs. Eben S. Draper of Boston and "The Ledges," Hopedale, who went over in June, are sailing at that time; also Mr. and Mrs. Horace Binney and their son, Horace Binney, Jr., now in foreign lands on their annual Summer journey.

MRS. REGINALD FOSTER of the Fenway, with Miss Elizabeth Foster and Maxwell Foster, are returning to town in the late Summer from a tour of some months, one of their very frequent crossings. Outgoing steamships, however, continue to carry interesting names on passenger lists.

VISITING BRITISH and American naval officers are honor guests in Bar Harbor this week, with tennis the star attraction—the Maritime Tennis Tournament is on at the exclusive Maine resort—and Boston's representation takes leading part as hostesses.

MESDAMES HARRY HILL THORNDIKE, Harold Peabody, Augustus Peabody and William C. Endicott are patronesses for Saturday's large ball at the Swimming Club gala, windup of a week's festivities. Miss Isabel Thorndike, eldest daughter of the Harry Hill Thorndikes, is a leader in the youthful Bar Harbor coterie.

THE JUST BEFORE mentioned patrons also figure largely as sponsors for the Kane Valley Golf Club putting contests, weekly affairs starring each Monday through the late season. Miss Isabel Thorndike came out two Winters ago at a large ball staged at the Hotel Somerset.

DISCOUNT RATE CUT BY BANK OF ENGLAND

London, Aug. 6 (A.P.).—The rate of the Bank of England has been reduced to 4½ per cent. from 5 per cent., which has prevailed since March of this year. While the money situation had eased considerably in late weeks, the announcement was a surprise.

The discount rate of the Bank of England was raised to 5 per cent. on March 5, confirming the action of the bank, a few days previously, in raising its loan charges after an advance of the re-discount rate by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

Trade circles in London then deplored the higher bank rate as a handicap, in financing trade, just when a turn for the better was visible, but financial interests explained it was the best policy to stabilize exchange by a higher bank rate and save the country many millions of dollars in the course of payment of interest on the British debt to America.

The concession of half of 1 per cent. in the rate will be welcomed by the trading community generally as forecasting another reduction should conditions warrant in the near future.

KIDNAP 53 CHILDREN IN MEXICO IN MONTH

Mexico City, Aug. 6 (U.N.S.).—Fear of the mysterious kidnaping peril which has taken more than fifty children from middle class families in a month, clutched with tighter hold at parents' hearts today as three additional disappearances baffled police.

Two girls and one boy were taken, vanishing utterly despite the strictest guard at the railway stations and on the roads leading from the Mexican capital.

Secret police agents enroute to Chinese and Japanese colonies on the west coast in the belief some of the fifty-three boys and girls may be held there, will not arrive for four days.

BEARING BODY OF BANCROFT TO AMERICA

Dead Ambassador Returning to U. S. Aboard Japanese Cruiser

Tokyo, Aug. 7 (A.P.).—A Japanese cruiser, the Tama, was bearing the body of Edgar A. Bancroft, Ambassador from the United States, back to America. The Ambassador died at Karuizawa on July 28.

Mourned by Japanese as a true friend of peace and as one who worked to maintain the friendliest of relations between the two governments, every honor was accorded by the government officials before the body was started homeward.

The streets from Hibiya Park to Tokyo station were lined with artillery and thousands of Japanese stood with bare heads, silently paying respects.

A military band played at the station and also one the departure of the train from Yokohama.

Wreaths from the Emperor and the Prince Regent were placed on each end of the coffin.

Six officials, including Vice-Minister De Buchi and representatives of Embassies accompanied the train to Yokohama. Officials there met the train and offered wreaths.

As the casket moved on a launch toward a Japanese warship, the Tama, a salute was fired by craft in the harbor.

The Tama sailed for the United States at 3 p. m., carrying the body.

LAST AMERICAN OUTING ON TUESDAY

"My Girl" Company to Entertain Mothers and Kiddies at Nantasket

Tuesday, August 11, is the last of the Boston Evening American outings and children's Outings at Nantasket Beach.

Up to date the Boston Evening American has entertained more than 9000 mothers and children, and next Tuesday's outing will bring the total up to about 12,000.

Through the courtesy of Manager Fred L. Lane of the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Company, the guests of the Boston Evening American have been given a delightful sail down the harbor to the beach.

Milk was distributed to all on these trips by H. P. Hood & Sons, and the Loose-Wiles Biscuit Company, makers of Sunshine Cookies, donated enough of their product for all.

Lockers for the bathers were furnished by Manager H. L. Sarkin of the Sagamore Baths at Nantasket.

For the final trip the principals and band of the "My Girl" company now playing at the Wilbur Theatre will entertain.

$500 REWARD FOR QUINCY VANDAL

Offered by Contractors for Man Who Wrecks Granite Yards

Again the unknown enemy, who for the last ten years has committed wanton acts of depredation against Guigo Serafinelli and other Quincy granite dealers, has become active.

It became known, last night, that the man visited the office of Serafinelli, on Forest street extension, and tore up a number of blueprints and contracts, and broke the office furniture.

The Quincy police and private detectives are searching for the culprit, and the Quincy Granite Manufacturers' Association has offered a reward of $500 for his arrest.

It is thought that the offender is the same man who chipped and defaced monuments in the granite yard of John R. Richards, Penn street, a few months ago, causing several hundred dollars' worth of damage.

Six weeks ago, someone set fire to sheds and other buildings of several of the dealers, causing heavy loss.

"SLAIN" BEAUTY CLEARS UP MYSTERY

New Haven, Aug. 6.—Search for Miss Fanny Hall, missing West Hartford beauty, thought murdered because her auto was found beside a lonely road near here July 12, came to a dramatic close.

A posse of detectives and police were gathered at police headquarters, about to search the woods near where the girl's car had been found.

But to the amazement of the police, in walked Miss Hall, as lively and as pretty a "corpse" as one would wish to see.

"Are you looking for me?" she asked. "I learned that I was missing." Explanations clearing away the mystery followed.

Miss Hall teaches school at Old Lyme, near New London. When her term was finished she took a Summer position at the Old Lyme Inn. She said she had written her parents about it, but the letter evidently was never delivered.

July 10, she said, her sport roadster was stolen. Police found it July 12, sent a notice to her West Hartford address, and received no reply because the letter had not been opened at her parents' home.

Yesterday when police investigated and found that her parents had received no word from her since the car had been found, it was believed the girl had been waylaid.

The persons who took the car, however, evidently abandoned it undamaged at the spot where it was found.

The girl's parents were quickly notified, her car was returned to her, and the posse was disbanded.

ARRESTED AND IN STATE PRISON IN 24 HOURS

In less than twenty-four hours after William Howard and Rufus Walker had made an unsuccessful attempt to rob Frank McGrath in his dry goods store on Dudley street, Roxbury, they were inmates of the State Prison at Charlestown.

Howard who pleaded guilty will serve a term of five to seven years, and Walker who was found guilty by a jury in about fifteen minutes got from ten to twelve years.

McGrath with one eye blackened and his head covered with sticking plaster testified that the two men came into his store and asked to be shown a cap. Walker pointed a revolver at him and told him to "come across."

Walker felled him with the butt of the pistol. Both men then fled the store and were captured by the police after a chase.

District Attorney O'Brien asked for a sentence of from fourteen to eighteen years for Walker, and for seven to ten for Howard. Attorney William McDonald who had been drafted to defend the defendants without compensation said that as neither of the men had a criminal record they were entitled to consideration.

Judge MacLeod agreed with Attorney McDonald and complimented him for his efforts in behalf of the prisoners. "The judge said. "The example of efficiency displayed by the police officers and by the District Attorney's office in bringing these men to trial is most important. Speedy justice is the most adequate deterrent for crime. I don't believe in sentences that can only be explained because they are exemplary."

OVER 100 KIWANIANS AT HAMPTON BEACH, N. H.

DRUNK BY "ACCIDENT" GETS JAIL SENTENCE

Lawrence, Aug. 6.—"Your Honor, I got drunk by accident," was the plea of Hugh Corey of Andover, haled into district court here on a charge of drunkenness. When the court remarked that drunkenness was a voluntary act Corey explained that he was a victim of the "treating habit." He met some friends yesterday and before he knew it he was drunk. The court sentenced him to two months in the house of correction.

U. S. PRESTIGE DECREASING IN C. AMERICA

Nation May Have to Take Over Carribean Country, Says Otto Schoenrich

Williamstown, Aug. 6 (A.P.).—American prestige in Central America has waned in the last five years and American ministers there have generally been political appointees, unprepared for their duties, Otto Schoenrich, former special commissioner to Santo Domingo said at a conference of the Institute of Politics today.

"Lack of continuity in the State Department and the unfamiliarity of the American officials with Central American affairs are among the causes of the diminuation of our influence," Mr. Schoenrich said. "The ministers have generally been ignorant of the Spanish language and absolutely unprepared.

"The political development of these countries and the material development of most of them is behind the world standard. Unless we render efficient assistance conditions may arise which force us to take over one or more of the Carribean countries or allow some foreign power to do so."

Mr. Schoenrich included the West Indies islands and the countries of Central America in his observations. America's Carribean policy was described as wavering. President Roosevelt took a strong attitude, but the policy of the United States was not firm with Charles E. Hughes as Secretary of State, the speaker said, asserting that what was accomplished was largely through moral suasion and bluff.

He referred to President Wilson's course in Mexico as "pusillanimous" and said Mr. Wilson was swayed from a strong attitude by considerations of European policy.

The merican record in Cuba was honorable and helpful, he said. American intervention in Haiti had proved a grievous disappointment to the inhabitants, but th epresent administration was more tactful and co-ordinated. American influences in Nicaragua he described as successful.

The judge will have a private entrance from Melvil e avenue. Three police vans can be kept in the basement. The building is of red brick and limestone construction. The estimated cost of the building is $210,000.

THE WISCONSIN FEDERATION OF LABOR criticises the University of Wisconsin for accepting from Rockefeller $12,500 for medical research. And that is FOOLISH.

The people as yet lack brains to control and develop their own resources and provide themselves with what they need. While that condition lasts they should be grateful to Providence, which impels men of ability to get money together, then hand it back to the people that don't know how to take care of themselves.

STUDY THE RECORD. You find that, in the long run, the little man pays. The British government, fearing a disastrous coal strike that might cost a thousand millions, persuaded mine owners not to cut wages by voting them a subsidy that won't amount to more than one hundred millions.

NOW COMES NEWS that the hundred millions will be raised by increasing the beer tax. The miners who drink the beer will pay the tax and won't realize that they and their fellow workers are really paying the subsidy that persuades the mine owners not to cut wages.

Why not tax champagne, whiskey and other expensive luxuries? Because men that use champagne and expensive luxuries also arrange the taxes.

EDUCATOR IS DROWNED AT DEER ISLE, MAINE

Deer Isle, Me., Aug. 6 (A.P.)—Edward Holden '23, a member of the faculty of University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, and son of Angell A. Holden, superintendent of schools at Hilsboro, N. H., was drowned

He waded beyond his depth while bathing on the shore of Eaggemoggin Beach near his Summer home, and was unable to swim. His brother, who probably could have saved him, had left the water a short time before the accident. His body was soon recovered and all the known efforts were made to resuscitate him. He was married and had two children.

Cider Analyzed 30 Days Late, Not Evidence

Washington, Aug. 6—Judge McMahon of the District of Columbia Police Court ruled that cider that has stood thirty days cannot be used as evidence as it is not a defendant. He explained that under the prohibition laws a "defendant" is a person. The court directed a verdict of not guilty in the case of Michael Rosenberg charged with possessing intoxicating liquor.

STARS AT ALEXANDER FUND SHOW

Above, left to right, appear Phebe Brune, the sensational dancer of the "Rose Marie" company, and Beatrice Kay, a member of the same company, who will appear tomorrow night at the Casino Theatre at the special performance in aid of the fund for the widow and children of Benjamin Alexander, killed in the Pickwick crash. Below, at right, are shown Hap Ward, the famous comedian, who will also participate, and George Curran, members of the Governor's Council, who will act as announcer.

Many leading business firms are co-operating with Charles H. Waldron, proprietor of Waldron's Casino, to make a success of the performance in his theatre for the benefit of the Boston Evening American Fund for the widow and six children of Police Inspector Benjamin Alexander, who was killed in the Pickwick crash.

PHEBE BRUNE ON PROGRAM.

Among the concerns that are aiding are Checker Taxi Company, which has placed six machines at the disposal of Mr. Waldron for the purpose of conveying performers to and from the Casino, Globe Ticket Company and Buck Printing Company of Boston, whose officials sent receipted bills for printing ordered from them, and Paramount and First National Pictures. Feature pictures from the last named firms will be shown at the performance.

"Hap" Ward, famous in the old days as one of the leading comedians of the American stage, will come to Boston tomorrow night for the special purpose of serving as announcer. Hon. George Curran of the Governor's Council will serve in the same capacity. "Al" Sourwine, general manager of several Boston theatres, will be stage director. Mayor James M. Curley will be present.

One of the star attractions will be Phebe Brune, who has scored a tremendous hit with her sensational dancing in "Rose Marie," now playing at the Majestic Theatre. Another principal of that company in the person of dainty Beatrice Kay, will also be on the program. They will appear, through special permission of the Messrs. Shubert, who are never found wanting when a good thing rises to a head.

SHOW IS LONG.

From Keith's Theatre Willie Solar, comedian, and George Kingsman, baritone, will appear. The offerings from Scollay Square Olympia Theatre will include Stuart & Olive Buick Comedy Four and Beamish & Douglass. The contribution from Boston Theatre will be Gozelian White's Big Unsold Revue.

Those from Washington Street Olympia will include Gerald Griffin famous Irish tenor, who recently sang for President and Mrs. Coolidge in a private concert at White Court, Swampscott. Brooks & Smith, and Jonathan Harrison. Those who will appear from the Bowdoin Theatre are Carl White, Driscoll & Barry, Thee Ferguson and McCuelick & Halliday.

Other acts on the bill will be Benny Drohan & Company in a new comedy sketch, A. Schubert Band of 40 musicians, Bryant's Jubilee Singers and "I Want My Man," a picture featuring Milton Sills.

Because of the length of the program Mr. Waldron has decided to begin tomorrow evening's performance at 7:45 o'clock. It will continue until midnight and will be first class in every respect. A crowded house is assured. Among the theatres contributing talent are Keith's Orpheum, Boston Olympia and Bowdoin Square.

The Fund closes next Saturday night. Only two more days, folks, in which to do your bit.

CHANGE MADE IN FURNITURE DESIGNS

American Mart In Chicago Has Helped Business in Many Ways

The change in furniture retailing created by the American Furniture Mart at Chicago has already had its effect in new and more attractive designs and increased marketing facilities, all of which will benefit the ultimate consumer, according to Benjamin Stern, president of the Summerfield Company.

Mr. Stern has just returned from an extensive buying expedition at the Mart, the world's largest building, where the great Summer Furniture Show was held.

He declared the Mart has raised the furniture industry from one of the poorest housed businesses to the best in the land. Mr. Stern added that there is no need of homes being furnished in the style of twenty years ago with heavy, unwieldy suites and pieces. The prevailing note today, he declared, is beauty and adaptability to home surroundings.

Detector Finds Lost Radium in Street

Barre, Vt., Aug. 6.—A small tube of radium worth $6,000, lost by a nurse, was found on the sidewalk in front of the Rogers Walkover boot house. The radium is the property of Dr. Carl P. Robinson. While returning from Orange with the valuable metal, which had been used to treat a patient, Mrs. Nettie Johnson, the nurse in charge of it, accidentally lost it. A detector used to find lost radium was finally resorted to and by following the powerful rays of the radium with this instrument, the small tube was discovered within a half hour after the search started.

SECOND SECTION

Vanessa, joined by Heatherer way, and Lord Culverdale, or Paul Porter, both of the "Rose Marie" Company. Photo by Charles Snyder.

Lord Hubert Culverdale, without the slightest betrayal of emotion, slips the engagement ring on Vanessa's finger.

LORD HUBERT ST. AUSTEL, confronted with the task of raising a huge sum of money quickly to protect old friends who have invested in his pet project, goes to BENJAMIN LEVY, a money lender. The latter refuses to aid except on condition that Lord St. Austel married his daughter, VANESSA LEVY. Lord Hubert promises to make his decision overnight. Vanessa falls in love with Hubert at first sight at the opera, where he decides he does not care for ALLICE, DUCHESS OF LINCOLNWOOD. Hubert tells his friend and companion, COL. RALPH DANGERFIELD, of his decision, and Levy informs Vanessa that she is to marry the very man she had fallen in love with.

CHAPTER IV

HUBERT'S valet, who hero-worshipped him—a rare case, caused by war companionship—was heard to remark to the butler, after his master had departed for Hampstead that night, that his lordship had exactly the look he'd always had when they were in for a spell of the trenches at some particularly muddy spot. (He had, I regret to say, used a word beginning with mud another letter which cannot be transcribed here. The butler, who had been over age and so unable to share the joys of foreign warfare, asked a little irritably of Mr. Harding: What kind of a look was that? And he was told that it was that of a bulldog when he'd got his teeth into something he did not like, but meant to hold on to!

Either knew that their master was dining for the first time with his fiancee.

Vanessa dressed with the greatest care. She did not dare to alter the style of her hair without asking her father's leave—but that she did not guess—nor that her phrasing in almost over-perfect English had something delightfully distinguished about it.

Even Hubert was aware that the few sentences she uttered had a charm for the ear. But his high-bred, casual tones pleased Vanessa more than anything she had ever heard. Everything about him thrilled her. She noticed his strong fine hands—and every atom of his dress, and the way his shirt fitted.

Avoids Looking at Fiancee

Hubert scarcely glanced at her—all his prejudiced eye took in was the impression of a short, rather gawky school girl, and the hand he shook was clammily cold. The whole thing made him feel so furious that he avoided looking at her again and confined himself to talking politics with his future father-in-law, with an occasional platitude thrown in to the two ladies. By the end of dinner Vanessa's heart had sunk into her tiny blue slippers and her cheeks were pure white.

Madame de Jerom had been prompted by her employer to inform his daughter before they had come down that Englishmen were very stiff, and that her fiancee would probably not think it correct to address her much—but never to look at her surely was overdoing it! The poor child suffered terribly. She felt awkward and ill at ease, and close to Lord St. Austel she even more attractive than she had imagined. She had never before heard a highly cultivated English voice—for her father's, like her own, had some slightly foreign intonation in it. In her case it was peculiarly alluring—but that she did not guess

AIDS 1 COP, 'BEATEN BY ANOTHER'

Patrolman Louis Murray Faces Charges of Attack on Ill Motorist

An obliging sort of a chap is Ralph Marcus of Rutland street, South End, but the next time he helps a policeman, he'll possess himself of a letter of marque from the commissioner, a sleeve band with the official colors, and a parking permit.

Marcus helped one policeman but was beaten up by another he helped today in pushing Patrolman Louis Murray of the East Dedham street station into a large tub of hot water.

The South End man has preferred formal charges against Murray and in his charges lists the following acts, which is backed up in the charges by Patrolman James Gouldrow and Lewis Thompson of No. 17 Sharon street, South End:

Sunday Marcus, driving in Tremont street, was halted at Paris street by Gouldrow, who asked him to drive to an alley off Rutland street as he was missing a tire.

ARRESTED FOR PARKING.

Marcus did so and arrived at the alley. Gouldrow asked that he accompany him, leaving the car parked in Rutland street. The man hailed the cop, but found no cop. Gouldrow then could not find the man. Marcus went home, while Murray went back for his car.

A man in civilian clothes was standing at the machine.

"Do you own this car?" he demanded, and on Marcus admitting ownership the stranger accused him of blocking traffic and said he would take the car. Marcus explained that he had been assisting Patrolman Gouldrow.

According to the charge Murray swung on him, telling him: "Where Marcus is out of the hospital and about three following an operation attempted to use the typewriter in him again, it is alleged.

RESCUER ARRIVES

Then Thompson, with another man, came driving along in his car and pulled up at the tableau just as Marcus, on the ground and hanging weakly with his hands to a mudguard, was again attempting to rise.

Thompson jumped out and inquired what the trouble was. According to the charge, Murray declared he was brutalizing Marcus "for being a wise guy," and he would take a punch at Thompson, too, if Thompson cared at all for it.

"You take a punch at me," retorted Thompson, 'and I'll pave the street with you!"

Murray climbed into his car and speeded away.

Thompson took Marcus to the East Dedham street station, where they preferred charges against Murray to Sergeant Bart Winn and to Acting Captain Murray Muiroe.

William R. Scharton has been retained as counsel for Marcus.

Convict Halts Delivery in Prison Fire

Baltimore, Aug. 6.—Fire destroyed the furniture factory of the State prison here, and the coolness and quick wit of a prisoner prevented what might have been a general delivery of prisoners.

Walter Mozinger, a convict, detected the blaze just as the other prisoners were filing into the mess hall. Instead of sounding the general alarm, Mozinger waited until the prisoners were all in their seats and then turned in a private alarm to the warden's office.

PROUT HONORED BY K. OF C. DELEGATES

Duluth, Minn., Aug. 6.—Delegates to the Knights of Columbus convention in session here were talking over many of the prospects as they were installed William C. Prout of Bangor, who he was elected to membership on the board of directors for the second time.

The New England delegations paid tribute those from Maine and other New State orders, rose en masse and cheered them as soon as Prout's name was placed in nomination by State Deputy L. Edward J. Brandon of Jersey City.

Edward M. Haggerty a Connecticut politician was placed in the running by Mayor Michael J. Quigley of New Haven, and Big Jim Mich deputy supreme knight, William J. Mc... of New Haven, were placed in J. Callahan, Washington, supreme treasurer; Luke H. Hart, St. Louis, supreme advocate; Dr. Edward W. Fahey, St. Paul, supreme physician; Mgr. P. J. McGivney, Bridgeport, Conn., supreme chaplain, David F. Supple, San Francisco, supreme warden.

The other four directors chosen were John H. Reddin of Denver; John F. O'Neil of Jersey City; George H. Potvin of Granby, Que., and Francis P. Matthews of Omaha.

Rev. John J. Wynne of New York said in his address:

"It would be a glorious thing for the Knights of Columbus to adopt Columbus Day as one of veneration in memory of those martyrs, holding meetings and exercises, for, based on the writings of non-Catholics whose high regard and esteem the church had thought so much of as to put into a decree, people of all denominations could participate in the observances."

WIN CASH AT REVERE BEACH

$100 Awaits American Reader Who Finds 'Cretonne Girl' There on Saturday!

The thousands of persons of all ages who frequent Revere Beach each Saturday are eagerly awaiting the appearance at the resort next Saturday of the Boston Evening American's "Girl in the Cretonne Coat."

There's a good reason for this anxiety. To the person who first finds the "Cretonne Girl" $100 in cash will be paid. Pictures of the girl appear on this page.

To give as big a money prize acceptable in the wide world than $100 in good opportunities to win such a fine cash is afforded to all readers of the Boston Evening American. And this a new opportunity arises.

Next Saturday, August 8, at the Revere Beach Bowl, between four in the afternoon and eight in the evening, the Boston Evening American Girl in the Cretonne Coat will be present among the promenaders on the boulevard and along the beach.

Whoever is the first to recognize her as the Boston Evening American's "Girl in the Cretonne Coat" will receive the $100.

But there is one stipulation.

To obtain the $100 as first person to recognize the "Girl in the Cretonne Coat" one must have in his or her hand at the time a copy of the Boston Evening American of issue of Saturday, August 8, and carrying each a copy, the fortunate person must step up to the girl and say:

You are the Boston American girl in the Cretonne coat. Show this person gives right and he the first to guess so, he or she will receive the $100.

PLENTY OF CRETONNE COATS

Of course there will be more than one person on Saturday for there will be a few more young women at Revere Beach wearing cretonne coats. In order to make the task of identification less difficult for Boston Evening American readers, this newspaper publishes today a facial identification of the "Girl in the Cretonne Coat." With this facial identification in your minds readers, it should not be too difficult to pick out the "Girl" next Saturday.

Remember, everyone! On Saturday next buy a copy of the Boston Evening American. Go to Revere Beach and stay there from four in the afternoon to eight in the evening, holding your copy of the Boston Evening American in your hand at all times.

If you think you have seen the "Girl in the Cretonne Coat" do not hesitate an instant, for he who hesitates may lose. Go right up to her, carrying your copy of the Boston Evening American in your hand, and say:

"You are the Boston Evening American Girl in the Cretonne Coat."

YOU MAY WIN.

You may be the one to win $100.

Beginning August 11 the Boston Evening American will conduct a series of bathing beauty contests at Revere Beach, and on that evening, the first of the series, "Miss Merrimack" is to be chosen. This contest is open to all young, pretty and shapely women, married or single, Republican or Democratic, or anything else, who live in the Merrimack Valley.

And last other sections of that vast territory served by the Boston Evening American should get jealous, these bathing beauty contests are to continue August 13, August 18, August 20, August 25, August 27, September 1, September 3, during which nights a "Miss Campridge," a "Miss Lowell," a "Miss Lawrence," etc. will be chosen.

Handsome cups will be awarded each of these evenings to the charming young ladies who are to be adjudged among the elegance of competent judges.

Last but not least, the final contest will be held at Revere Beach some night during August, and at this contest will be chosen from all over. The award for the fortunate winner in this final contest will be $100 in gold. Further details as to the bathing beauty contests will be printed soon.

HERE IS A PHOTO OF THE 'CRETONNE' GIRL

Watch for this girl next Saturday at Revere Beach. She will be wearing a cretonne coat. A cash prize of $100 awaits the person who recognizes her.

EXPLORER ON 'AIR' IN ICE FIELDS

Leader of Polar Dash Talks Over 3,700 Miles to the Associated Press

Arlington Heights, Ill., Aug. 6 (A.P.).—News interviews by personal contact and other ordinary domestic means today gave way to the romance of radio when the Associated Press interviewed the MacMillan Polar Expedition, 3,700 miles away, in the Arctic wastes.

Lieutenant Commander Eugene F. McDonald of the S. S. Peary, which conveyed the expedition to its base at Etah, Greenland, answered a series of five questions radioed to him by The Associated Press from station S. X. N. of the Zenith Radio Corporation, Chicago, of which Mr. McDonald is the president.

NO 2-WAY TALK YET.

Difficulties in the questions and dealing with the future flight of airplanes to the polar region from Etah, was McDonald's reply, that he had not yet completed "two-way communication" with planes, but hoped to perfect such communication.

His reply was regarded by officials of the Zenith Corporation here as being a possible plan of McMillan to communicate occasionally with his pilots chiefs in planes while they were in the air northward from Etah.

The three planes have already made successful test flights, according to reports received in this city.

The five questions and answers recorded here:

What point and greatest distance has been heard or transmitted by radio would be of interest to the Associated Press newspapers?"

"I have heard code from New Zealand. Have worked code England, France, Holland, Sweden and Catalina Island. Heard voice Chicago and Schenectady in day light. Transmitted voice and have been reported heard in Seattle, New England and London."

"Have messages been using radio receivers and what do they say about ice?"

"We found only one missionary using radio, the Rev. Peritt, Hopedale, Labrador, who has been to his home in London only three times in thirty-two years, gets mail seldom and says radio is great boon. I presented missionaries with sets which they most needed them. They can't get many radios as they have no efficient funds to buy other necessaries desired."

HAS HEART GUIDE.

"Is the Eskimo guide Ikookeash with you?" (Ikookeash was guide with Peary and MacMillan on a previous expedition.)

"I have no news with us."

"What is possible to reach your planes by radio?"

"Have difficulty in maintaining two-way communication with planes, but expect to eradicate this."

"Do Eskimos fully appreciate radio concerts?"

"He just accepts it as another great work of the white man and is to him one more wonderful than the phonograph."

Mcmillan answered the questions prior to request they be confined to the polar trip.

Find Native's Skull Like That of Men 35,000 Years Ago

Cape Town, South Africa, Aug. 6 (A.P.).—South Africa has added another link to the chain of evidence supporting the theory of a fossilized skull at Taungs, Bechuanaland, described as representing something midway between man and the great apes.

When dissected the body of a native who died here recently was found to have a typical "Boskop" skull, virtually identical with that discovered in the Transvaal in 1913 and traced back to the ice age, 35,000 years ago.

FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 5.—Many Americans when they read that this country spent more than four billion dollars last year and almost as much in 1924 for building must wonder where all of it has been going on. A tour over the country would give them the answer. Not only are distinctly better and more costly homes being built everywhere for workers, but enormous sums are now going into the finest of office buildings, hotels, schools, theatres, department stores, garages, factories, banks, apartment houses, etc.

Here in Atlanta are notable new buildings. Two exceptionally attractive residential sections are being opened up and dotted with beautiful homes. One close to the city, Morningside Park, and the other several miles out, known as Avondale estates.

Although it is only eighteen months since I was last here, I note many important new buildings. The Atlanta Biltmore, as fine a hotel as is to be found in the United States, has been completed and I learn has been doing very well. Other notable building include the Henry Grady Hotel, the Robert Fulton Hotel, the Ansley Hotel Annex, the Glenn Building, the McElwaen Bowen Building and a conspicuous structure at 101 Marietta street.

* * *

Atlanta is one of the few growing and progressive cities in America that has had adequate housing facilities. In a greater need at present is more industries and increased payrolls. New industries are now coming on a considerable scale, and only the other day the City Council authorized the creation of a department of advertising, while a million dollar fund is to be used by the State to let the world know what Georgia has to offer those seeking profitable channels for capital and desirable agricultural lands or the pleasantest of living conditions.

'TIPS' HELP STOCKS TO SET FRESH HIGHS

Widespread circulation of "tips" on individual stocks and the fact that many of them have made good have no doubt contributed much to the establishment of high record quotations established on recent market sessions and at the same time have helped to weaken the technical structure of the market. This sort of buying, it must be admitted, is enabling the so-called insiders to unload on the public, and it is becoming more and more a question how long "inside" support will continue after distribution has been completed. This does not mean to sell higher for reasons warranted by current earnings and prospects, but so far as the general market is concerned this is a time when greater discrimination in the purchase of stocks should be used than a few months ago.

MOTION PICTURE FILM EXPORTS REACH A PEAK

Motion picture film exports in the fiscal year 1925 just ended were larger than in any earlier year and aggregate 8½ million feet in value against 2¼ millions in 1913. They go on all parts of the world, notably the Orient, Latin America, Australia, and the Latin American countries. The Oriental demand is comparatively very small. The "drama" is the principal factor in films demanded at home and abroad. Our number picture houses are equal in number to those of the principal European countries. Value of our annual outturn of films 350 000,000.

BANK OF ENGLAND'S DISCOUNT RATE LOWER

Bank of England rate has been cut to 4½ per cent. from 5 per cent. Current lowering of discount rate is the first change since early in March of this year, when the rate was raised from 4 per cent. to 5 per cent. Previously the 4 per cent rate had prevailed from July 3, 1923, when it was increased from 3 per cent.

DILLON GIVEN CROSS FOR AID TO POLAND

By FRANK H. MELDON
Financial Editor

Up to the first half of the eighteenth century, it was the custom to reward with medals and kindred honors only those who walked where the soldiers had already trodden. The men who provided the financial sinews of war were more or less despised. The viewpoint as to how men may best serve their own or other countries has been steadily changing these many years past.

* * *

Swift, in his "Voyage to Brobdingnag," wrote: "And he gave it for his opinion that whoever could make two ears of corn, or two blades of grass, to grow upon a spot of ground where only one grew before, would deserve better of mankind and do more essential service to his country, than the whole race of politicians put together."

All this I note properly to the news that the Polish Minister of Foreign Affairs has conferred the Grand Cross of his Order of Polonia Restituta upon Clarence Dillon, head of Dillon, Read & Company, and decoration of an officer of that society upon Robert O. Hayward of that firm "in recognition of services they have rendered Poland in the country" declared he was convinced that America's finance would greatly aid in the reconstruction of the world and the elimination of war.

Dr. C. K. Leith, chairman of the Institute of Politics conference at Williamstown, discussing world oil possibilities, stressed the necessity for the open door in oil development in all countries, as the United States could not maintain its present large production and exports. Unless the open-door policy is established and those able to develop oil lands most efficiently are permitted to do so he expects a world shortage, as it takes five to fifteen years to develop new foreign pools and, while the United States might supply its own needs, other countries will feel the pinch unless adequate open-door development is started in time.

F. Julius Fohs, chairman of the petroleum division of American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, and head of Appomatox Oil Corporation, and Canada, and dictators and gave it as his opinion that there was room for 50 United States production passed, with possibility of another peak in 1928 or soon thereafter should the soft domes now being located by geophysical methods in the Gulf Coast, prove the production anticipated, this being the only very large United States possibility in sight. New pools are expected in many present districts and much additional oil from deeper sands, but, to prevent too rapid depletion, purchasing was urged in development pools by our nationals and imports of foreign oil.

Perhaps in a few years we will be reading with amazement of the waste going on in oil production today. Already the practice of gasoline price cutting wars in New England is likely to surprise our descendants. In the meantime, the action of the oil stocks today provides a puzzle for the Wall and State street "experts." If it does not prove to be a "flying out" process we shall observes be surprised.

DU PONT DIVIDEND ACTION IS DISCUSSED

In bull markets such as the present rumors of "melon cuttings" are a continuous topic of discussion, and the sensational gains in such stocks as American Can, Mack Trucks, du Pont and others no doubt are the forerunners of action favorable to stockholders. With the close proximity of the coming meeting of du Pont directors, which is scheduled for August 17, the question of what form of increase of an increase in the common dividend rate should receive the bulk of attention. The present annual rate is $70 a share, but the stock will be increased by 40 per cent on August 15 as result of the share distribution declared in June.

It is generally believed that the quarterly rate on the increased amount to be paid on November 16 will be $2 a share, which would be equivalent to $11.20 a share on the present issue. A larger cash distribution by du Pont directors will depend on the action of the General Motors board, which meets August 13, when an extra of $1 a share on the common is expected. Du Pont's quarterly receipts from its holdings of 1,340 000 shares of General Motors common amounts to $2,010,000, or an extra of $1.50 a share, the forthcoming meeting would swell the total to $3,350,000

NO CHAMPAGNE AT THE CYCLE A. C. LAUNCHING

FIGHTERS TO GIVE PUNCH

Cook Favorite for Ten-Round Tussle With Stoessel at Revere Track

By JACK CONWAY.

GEORGE COOK, thick set, determined Australian heavyweight, has been installed a betting favorite for his ten-round bout with the lanky Joe Stoessel at the launching of the new Cycle A. C. at the Revere Cycle Track tomorrow night.

Jack Conway

This proves that the speculative gentlemen do not give much consideration to weight when they are naming the favorites. Cook will be out weighed by more than twenty pounds, but the wise boys figure he carries too many guns for his opponent. If Mister Stoessel slaps Cook on the chin with a right hand wallop, it may be a different story.

In the old days when they had any kind of a launching there was always an ocean of champagne and divers other cooling stimulants on tap to relieve the moans, worriment connected with such affairs. In his invitation to the public to attend his opening after visiting the well known box office, Col. McKirdy doesn't mention anything about refreshments. As there is plenty of ocean handy to Nut Rubber's track, the boys can take a plunge into the surf if they figure they are in need of anything cooling.

To quote Paddy Mulrehan hosom pal of the Colt's. "Times ain't just like they used to be in the good old days."

Lest Col. Eddie Mack says that if the box office receipts are high enough of a kick that will manage to struggle along without any champagne.

TOM KIRBY, clever Roxbury lightweight, and Jack Kirby, Ethel of merry old England, will not take part in the launching of the good ship Cycle A. C.

Both of these young men have visions of getting into a ring with Tiger Flowers and figure that the best way to do it is by coming through with a win tonight.

Kirby, to quote any of a dozen leading fight managers, has everything in the fistic line. With a few wins under his belt these gents seem believe Kirby would prove a real riot.

Eliot is one of these persistent fighting men who keeps going forward every second he is in the ring. That's true of most of the other British fighters. You can't take away from them the fact they are dead game and always willing to stand up and swap blows with an opponent.

THERE'LL also be a ten-round event between Jimmy Madden of Roxbury and Jack Evans of Charlestown, famed as the Clonlakilla Cloister.

Rocky Stone is keeping out of those one-arm places so that he will be all set for a four-round event with Dan Logan or some other citizen who is not too touch.

It's a good fighting card and should produce plenty of action. Co McKirdy and Lieut. Mack delight in ring action, while they also crave a little cash. Maybe they'll get both tomorrow evening.

JUNIOR GOLFERS DOING FINE AT WOODLAND

4 PLAYING IN FIRST DIVISION

Club Announces That All Matches Will Be Played From Scratch

By BILL GRIMES.

One of the finest features of the qualifying round of the Woodland Golf Club mid-Summer tournament was the showing made by the twelve junior players entered.

Ralph Munro, the present junior champion, turned in a 78. Marshall W. Forrest, the champion last year; Charlie Grasse, who was the first to let with Munro this year, and F. Besse, Jr., who qualified for match play at Tedesco, are in the first division. Forrest and Grasseo had 76s and Besse took a 75. Munro, Grasseo, Forrest and Besse are a very clever quartet of youngsters.

Although there were many strange faces in the field, the scoring on the whole was very good.

Among the other juniors who were in action were J. H. Carleton of Meadow Brook, who qualified at Tedesco, John Merwin from Concord, S. W. Hopkins of Chestnut Hill, James Baldwid, another Concord boy, and C. O. Dooley of the Scarboro Golf Club. Eddie Murphy was very much off his game taking an 82

The fine showing made by the boys speaks well for the calibre of play in junior ranks. It is doubtful if there is any section in the country better fortified for future golf talent than Massachusetts.

Walter B. Sharp of the Woodland Golf Club certainly took the bull by the horns when he announced that the first, second and third divisions in the mid-Summer tournament would play from scratch. Although many clubs have thought of trying out this method of play, which is used extensively throughout the south, it remained for Woodland to make the first step. On top of his announcement that the first three divisions would be scratch matches, Chairman Sharp added that players with eight and under handicaps would be eligible for the first division only, that nine to twelve men who did not qualify for the first or second flights would get match play and that those having handicaps from thirteen to sixteen had to make the third division grade or they were out.

"MATTY" IMPROVING; IS KEEPING TABS ON BRAVES

New York, Aug. 6. (A. P.)—Far from being in critical condition, as some reports have had it, Christy Mathewson—the beloved "Big Six" of other baseball days, now a magnate president of the Boston Braves—is in good health and keen spirits, taking as lively an interest as ever in the game which is closest to his heart.

The authoritative information came on the shores of Saranac from the same Lake the Adirondack Mountain resort where Mathewson makes his home and spends a good share of his time.

In Matty's own words, he is "feeling fine." He is rapidly regaining the strength which was a little undermined last Spring when he assumed too heavy a burden in trying to mould the fortunes of the Boston club for the 1926 campaign.

His interest in baseball never lags. It is part of his life. He follows both major league races very closely, studying with particular attention the progress of his own club, the Braves, and the fortunes of the team with which he earned his greatest fame, the Giants.

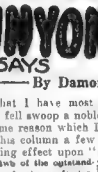
RUNYON SAYS

Gate Crashers Quit. Old One-Eyed Retires. So Does P. Blackman. They Threaten Work. Mr. Young, the Champion.

By Damon Runyon.

IT appears that I have most unwittingly practically wiped out at one fell swoop a noble industry, that of "gate crashing." For some reason which I cannot fathom, an article that appeared in this column a few days ago seems to have had a most devastating effect upon "gate crashers."

It has caused two of the outstanding figures of the profession, Mr. One-Eyed Connolly, 2nd, and Mr. Pitts Blackman, of Cincinnati, to formally announce their retirement from the field of "gate crashing." Moreover, they threaten to go to work.



Damon Runyon.

I have a written statement from Mr. Pitts Blackman to this effect, while Mr. One Eyed Connolly, 2nd, made a public announcement to the press at the Queensboro Arena last week, even before I heard from Mr. Blackman.

As Mr. One-Eyed Connolly, 2nd, made his announcement to a member of the press who sat behind me, I felt a strange burning sensation on the back of my neck, as if some one were looking at a lighted cigaret there. I realized at once that this was caused by Mr. One-Eyed Connolly, 2nd, focussing his single orb upon me with a very hot glance.

MY conscience troubles me no little in this matter. I did not expect the article to produce such dire consequences as causing Mr. One-Eyed Connolly, 2nd, and Mr. Pitts Blackman to think of going to work.

It was my thought in writing it merely to review the "gate crashing" situation in an impartial manner for the benefit of the readers of this column, and to present such contending arguments as I could find, and according to his just desserts.

The article was inspired, as you may recall, by a letter from Mr Pitts Blackman in which he complained that I was not giving him due consideration with other "gate crashers," especially Mr. Tammany Young, the moving picture actor, who claims the championship.

I have not heard from Mr. Tammany Young. I do not think Mr. Tammany Young will retire, nor do I think Mr. Tammany Young will threaten to go to work. I am inclined to the belief that Mr. Tammany Young will tranquilly accept the withdrawal of Mr. One-Eyed Connolly, 2nd, and Mr. Pitts Blackman as merely a testimonial to his own superiority as a "gate crasher."

IT should be said on behalf of Mr. Tammany Young, however, that in farming Mr One Eyed Connolly, 2nd, and Mr. Pitts Blackman to a test. He did not shrink from their challenge, or attempt to postpone the issue until next year. He said the old champion stood ready to meet all comers at once at any gate.

I am commencing to think that Mr. Tammany Young is fearless as regards responsible for his habit of victory. And yet the fact that Mr. One-Eyed Connolly, 2nd, and Mr. Pitts Blackman were willing to withdraw from a contest indicates that they were never true contenders. They are lacking in heart.

THIS announcement of retirement by Mr. One-Eyed Connolly, 2nd, came after he had failed to crash the portals of the Queensboro Club, which is regarded as a comparatively easy gate to crash.

I learn with regret that my article on "gate crashers" caused the Cerebuses of the Queensboro gates to open their eyes pooled, as for saying is, for Mr. One-Eyed Connolly, 2nd. As they had a number of eyes to Mr. One-Eyed Connolly's lone orb, it was an unequal struggle.

Mr. One-Eyed Connolly, 2nd, was easily apprehended on his first attempt to crash. I am informed that Mr. One-Eyed Connolly, 2nd, put no real vim and vigor into the attempt, anyway. He seemed depressed and low in his mind. Some say it was due to the statement in my article that Mr. Tammany Young is the possessor of a Tuxedo, and frequently crashes gates so appareled that he is mistaken for the headwaiter, or one of the guests.

CROWD HISSES DEMPSEY AT AUDITORIUM

Los Angeles, Aug. 6.—Jack Dempsey was sparring under a new worry today, following his introduction here last night at the ringside at the opening of the new $1,000,000 Olympic Boxing Auditorium.

The heavyweight champion was hissed and booed most of the time he was in the ring by many of the 16,000 spectators. Cries of "bring on Harry Wills" filled the huge arena, causing Dempsey to flush.

Dempsey, looking pale and tired made his appearance in evening clothes

KERR MAY LIFT CHISOX INTO 2D PLACE

By NICK FLATLEY

If Dick Kerr, who joins the Chicago White Sox this afternoon, brings back any real portion of his old cleverness, the Western club will be in pretty good position to challenge for second place in the A. L. standing As things have gone, the Eddie Collins entry has outdistanced both Tigers and Browns, the real rivals in the battle for the smaller portions of the world series cut.

The Chisox are some nine games back of the Washington champions, but don't figure that crevasse too tough for bridging. The Senators seem to have cracked because their pitching has flopped. The Athletics are beginning to be top heavy favorites for the flag.

If the Chicago troupe can shoot Kerr into the melee, and Dickie can emerge with a winner, and then, the E. Collins initial manager-ial effort will be a whale of a success.

The pitchers begin to weaken when the races wear well into August. The strain tells on the arms, and real fighting wears down the endurance. This is usually true in any league. The club that can pick up a stray hearer when the pressure is on, go somewhere here. The Senators proved that a year ago.

They adopted Curly Ogden from the Athletics, and the young man proceeded to win nine games in a row. That gave the other pitchers a chance to save themselves. So they had plenty of stuff for a spectacular finish.

Contrary to general practice, the White Sox pitching has been improving during the last month.

If Kerr comes to the rescue, either of the teams up above that swaggers into a continued slump would better look out.

Fenway Sidelights

A DOUBLE header Saturday will take care of yesterday's postponement.

MOST of the Sox are strangers to Dickie Kerr. Teams change a lot in three years, especially when losing.

OWNER BOB QUINN admits that his club is driving him crazy. But he also admits that he can't do anything about it right away.

EDDIE COLLINS says that Harry Hooper is playing just as well in the outfield as ever he did. We always thought Harry would be pretty good, if he stuck to it

Larry Benton Faces Cards

St. Louis Aug 6.—Although the Braves were crushed in opening the series with the Cards by a 14 to 2 count, Manager Bancroft is not discouraged. Three more games are to be played and Benny, remembering that his aide interrupted the Cardinals winning streak when he was here before and only recently back home, won two games in a single is still confident of leaving town on the long end of the count.

He has Larry Benton, Kyle Graham, Jesse Barnes, Johnny Cooney and Bob Smith for pitching service and he is positive that a farce like the one of yesterday will not be repeated.

Flint Rhem, who promised to sprout as a sensation this year, but who has lost his last five games, is due to face the Braves today.

Here's Conway's Boy

He Ought to Be Good, Because Jack Has Seen Them All

MR. "AL",
Boston Evening American.
My Dear Old Pal:

I got that Old Pal line from Cupid's heavenly twin in putting on box fights at the Commercial Club and the New Cycle A. C.

Bob didn't get a patent on the Old Pal stuff and so its O. K. for me to shoot it at you. If you're going to be a regular fight manager, you ought to be wised up on the Col.'s Old Pal how-do-you-do

When your boys, Desmonthenes Z. Larynx, Ad Nouis and Lippy Gloria Jick Jim Maloney or Jack Sharkey, and get into the money, you will find yourself paying a visit on the Col. He'll smile gleefully and then pull the Old Pal stuff That's the time to hold fast to your demands for the big jack for your fancy dive-ers for the Col. wouldn't insult anybody he calls Old Pal by giving him a big purse and in that way getting his Pal into a lot of trouble with those income tax collectors.

I've given you the tip-off on the Colonel and also as to my own intentions. Now that you're a manager it doesn't mean anything even though I Old Pal you. I am merely kidding you along so that I can relieve you of your reputation as a manager while you're wondering whether one of your back divers will flop quick enough to enable you to catch the 11 o'clock train to Norwood.

IT'S not a bad idea, though, for a country gentleman I have ourself to grub a stake of tin eared boys. You can have them cut your lawn and hoe potatoes instead of doing road work. Of courses you remember Rob Roy Hamilton, former sports writer who is now doing a ballyhoo stunt for Dempsey. I met Rob on Summer street one day while he was acting as manager of Sailor Darden, colored boxer.

"Want a bucket of clams," asked Rob.

"No," we answered, "Tom Goodwin is over in New York this week and we wouldn't have anybody to give them to."

"Well, continued Rob, "I can fix you up with a bucket of clams any day. My boy, Darden, always jobs up a flock of clams each day before he does the chores around my place at Wollaston."

So, Al, if your various box fighters can't make any jack for you in the ring you should keep them on the little homestead tidy out in Norwood.

I WOULD also suggest that you get in a flock of groceries and canned goods for fighters must eat. Rocky Hicks tells me he sometimes spends as much as 20 cents on a single meal I would suggest, too, that you take Rocky out to your place. He would be able to tip off your people on the proper length of time to linger in the ring with the various punch flingers he's boxed.

Rockey is also a wise bird in getting the opposition to cease fisting I am still giggling over the time Rocky was boxing with Hambone Kelley in the gym. Hambone had Rocky on the ropes and was passing him so hard that the latter's associators were shrieking.

Rocky finally set himself on his shredales and, hoisting the handsome one off, said:

"You big bum, Hambone, don't punch me so hard. I'm tired."

YOU have so many boys under your wing, Al, that I thought you must be a wrestling promoter like Jack Curley. Jack also has a regiment of beef with funny names like your floppers. I hope your floor layers won't feel offended because I refer to them as floppers. I might call them by some of the names the gallery gods wut soon be tossing at them.

Anyhow, Al, I got out on the beach at Allerton and dug myself up a fighter by the name of Somersault Diver. He's the merry flop kid himself. I knew he'd make good in the ring after I saw my year and a half old baby boy knock him over with a sand shovel.

Now that we're managers, Al, let's be practical fellows like Jim MacDonald, Johnny Buckley, Johnny McGrath, Charley Cardin and the rest of the boys who are handling the big league talent hereabouts

You have a flock of bums, Freddy Lane has one sap, while Nick Flatley has another. I'll toss my entry in with the rest and wager he's rotten, but no worse than any of the other eggs who are going to be scrambled in this man's omination.

SO let's do a Dempsey and Kearns.

Keep your meal tickets in one part of the country while you go to another. Talk about moving picture queens, contracts, bitter controversies and what not. Freddy Lane, Nick Flatley and myself will also talk as though we were trying sion to one of those Nonsense Factories.

And when we get the public steamed up enough about our boys we'll shot the works to some promoter like Bob McKirdy, Tom Good win, Johnny McCann or Dan Carroll and then wait around until the house is counted. It wont make much difference who wins as we have enough fighters in reserve to keep the merry-go-around whirling and the turnstiles clicking.

Since the management gave the public an early Christmas present by dropping the price of our paper to two cents, I think the Big Four can afford to get up on the toes as he now wants to give the boys a ten cent paper for two cents. These new prices enable us to get the best side of fight promoters. They want to give the public five times their money's worth every time.

It would be lots easier managing a fighter who knew how to dive in the right tank, than it is grinding out sport copy and writing up editions while Freddy Lane is enjoying his vacation

Let the ballyhoo get going

SIMON PURE FOILS MYSTERIOUS STRANGER

SAVES COIN INTENDED FOR MATES

Places the Well-Known Mazuma in His Own Cigar Box for Safety

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

(CHAPTER 6)

Which tells of the mysterious stranger, and how Simon Pure solves the great cigar box mystery and saves the job of the coach, the honor of South Orange, and incidentally, the season's salary of the South Orange squad.

AN ordinary human being would have been trampled to death by the maddened mob that surrounded the mysterious stranger. But there was something about this apostle of evil tidings that made women faint and strong men reach for flasks.

With two beady eyes gleaming in deep shadow and a hawk-like beak curving down over his upturned mouth the stranger presented a sight that unnerved the cool of the bravest.

With a flourish the mysterious stranger threw back his cloak and from under his arm drew forth a box. Leering coarsely, Polyfax Winn saw that it was the box wherein he had for the past ten weeks deposited the weekly pay envelope of each of his twenty players.

PLAYFAIR wilted like a reed in a prairie fire and fell to the ground frothing at the mouth.

Here began the stranger to enjoy a refreshing repast. South Orange has one of the highest salaried players. As the president of the Society for the Preservation of Amateurism I propose to make this fact known to the world and South Orange will go down in the ignominious depths of the shame that comes of prostituting amateur sport."

The president of South Orange was aghast. He could not believe his ears. The avenging angel of the grave followed the awful pronouncement of the stranger.

Suddenly from out of the crowd Simon Pure stepped up to the stranger.

"You are, my friend, a madman or a liar," said Simon in a calm, clear voice that carried even to the quivering ears of the crowd. Everybody held his breath in expectancy.

"Produce the proof demanded Simon, his tone becoming more menacing.

THE stranger cast a fierce glance of hate at Simon, and showing his fangs declared triumphantly, "Here it is." He opened the box. Simon snatched the box and held it up to the crowd. It was empty.

That night the squad assembled in Coach Wynn's room. Gasps clinked and toasts were drunk. And Simon after much urging told how he defeated the wicked machinations of the Society for the Preservation of Amateurism.

"I was afraid," said Simon, that something would happen to that cigar box. So each week I made a substitute in the box for the one on Coach Wynn's desk. I was act on the principle that cigar boxes are bad places to keep money in, so you always carry your cash with you."

From the distance drifted the strains of that fighting song. Why the rest of the story sounds like the amateur is making dough," and the manager of the football squad joined in the chorus.

THE END.

That is the end of this absorbing serial. But fear not Mr. McSweeney has several other series "on the fire." One of them will begin on these pages soon.

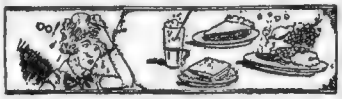
Table Talk



Sometimes I dine with a friend of mine
Who hands out the following verbal line:—

"I can't have starch and I mustn't eat fat,
Sugar? Oh, no, I never touch that!

Too much carbo-hydrates I can't endure
And I won't have cream—that's one thing, sure.

There's too much protein in fresh meat,
And eggs and cheese I never eat.

I find that coffee, as well as tea,
Seldom—if ever—agrees with me.

I simply abhor all foods in tins,
While bread, I observe, lacks vitamines.

As for solid fruits, they give me a pain,
And I'll NEVER use alcohol again!"

* * * * *

I can hear the clods on my coffin crunch—
When I think of the things I had for lunch.

And I pray to whatever gods there be
That the dieting complex will not strike me!

AT THE NEIGHBORHOOD HOUSES

Some favorites who have been sorely missed from local screens are now appearing at neighborhood houses. The Franklin Park offers Seena Owen in "Faint Perfume." Seena has hosts of fans; for she started her movie career in 1914. But she has been missing from view for quite a while now. Wanda Hawley, another prime favorite, who has been unseen for quite a spell, is at the Fields Corner tomorrow and Saturday in "Step Flirting." Sylvia Breamer reappears at the Allston in "Women and Gold." And Larry Semon, whose two-reelers ceased some time back, is at the Strand in a full-length farce, "The Girl in the Limousine."

The he-men stars are also represented well on neighborhood screens. Dick Talmadge will go "Tearing Through," starting tomorrow at the Harvard. Tom Mix portrays the real-life Robin Hood, "Dick Turpin," at the Dorchester; and has an up-to-date Western role at the Hamilton, beginning tomorrow, in "Riders of the Purple Sage." Harry Carey is at Gorman's Roslindale in "The Night Hawk," and Bob Custer will begin riding his stuff tomorrow at the Hamilton. At the Hamilton "Play Ball," by the hero of millions of baseball fans, John J. McGraw, will accompany the Custer film.

Reginald Denny, who is at the Capital all week in "I'll Show You the Town," is as much of a home as any of the movie heroes, and a comedian as well. "I'll Show You the Town" is a barrel of laughs.

* * *

Strongheart, red-blooded dog, is the hero at the Codman Square. He's starring in "White Fang" or you can see this uncanny canine in "White Fang" at the Dudley Theatre, starting tomorrow.

4 U. S. WOMEN OUT OF FIVE TOO HEAVY

Chicago, Aug. 8.—Eighty per cent of American women are forty to sixty pounds overweight due to lack of exercise and improper diet, about 15 per cent are underweight for the same or similar reasons.

Charles White, veteran of 240 ring battles and who at his retirement took his fortune, estimated at $750,000 and established a health resort here, is authority for the statement. Since retiring from the squared circle two years ago he has given physical examinations to about 5000 women.

"Married woman past twenty-one are, with rare exceptions, in poor physical condition," White said. "Let I be said in favor of the coreless and slim flapper of sixteen to twenty-one, about whom there is so much concern, that she is in far better physical trim than her older married sister.

"I have scarcely ever examined a matron who is not 'too fat.' Most of the women I examine have little exercise and get things they know are bad for them and at every to their physical good. Many further in the direct use of 'starvation diets' or elastic appliances rather than take proper exercise and healthful diet.

"While the average woman of from twenty-one to thirty-three years of age may be described as in 'negative' physical condition, the ones of thirty-three and over possess the most physical defects.

"I can tell at a glance at the question of a woman who wishes to know what to do to reduce or gain weight. While continued and that is proper and simple exercise and correct, balanced diet, similar to the training undergone by athletes.

"If every woman in the country would 'go into training' similar to that of the boxer, baseball player, the track athlete or the basketball player for ninety days, the result would be a nation of women more beautiful than any in history.

"Probably the most harmful of all the average woman's ideas of reducing methods is the so-called 'starvation diet.' It matters not how much one eats, but the kind of food consumed tells the story. Then, too, after a good 'training camp' diet for a few weeks the surplus weight lost will, I have found, stay off while fat returns rapidly when a 'starvation diet' is discontinued."

"NANETTE" TO LEAVE BOSTON NEXT MONTH

H. H. Frazee, producer of "No, No, Nanette," brings word to Boston that his record-making musical show will leave the Tremont on Saturday, Sept. 13.

Playing to capacity at every performance, and with the better part of the season ahead, "No, No, Nanette" could remain in Boston until Thanksgiving. Strong efforts have been made to postpone the New York opening, but the booking powers will not yield.

"No, No, Nanette" was originally booked for New York for Labor Day of last year, at the Music Box. Its success in Chicago was so great, however, that the first move the company headed by Louise Groody made was to Boston. It is now in its 14th week here.

"Hope You Don't Mind Marrying Me"

After dinner the two older persons thought fit to leave the fiances to speak to each other, while they wandered to a farther part of the room on some pretext. Hubert began he was unaware of it, but there was a shade of arrogance, and even sarcasm, in his tone. For he thought the daughter must be just as great a schemer as the father, to be willing to take him without knowing him.

"I hope you don't mind much marrying me, Miss Levy," he said.

"My father has told me of your wishes." Her beautiful eyes were turned to the carpet again, or she would have seen the flash of surprised contempt in Hubert's.

"And, of course, I do as he desires me which is that I comply with them."

Hubert brought out a fine diamond ring he had bought at Cartier's this afternoon.

"Will you wear this, please," and he took her hand. It had grown whiter now that her circulation had improved, but he never saw that the shape was perfect, or the nails polished delicately. He just slipped the ring on and dropped the hand at once.

"Thank you," he muttered, and then turned away, as Benjamin Levy, scenting that complications might arise, joined them again quickly.

"I shall be obliged to go down to my property in Wales for a fortnight on Monday," Hubert announced to his future father-in-law, "but I hope you and Miss Levy and Madame de Jarnac will dine with me on Sunday night to meet my aunt, Lady Merton, and my uncle and aunt, Lord and Lady Hurlshire."

Mr. Levy accepted with pleasure. He was immensely gratified that Lord St. Austel was taking it so well. But he knew the breed of gentlemen—and had calculated that once the bargain was made his lordship would probably be suavely courteous, whatever he might feel.

Bombshell Falls on London Town

They talked a little longer. Benjamin Levy's views on matters of state were always worth listening to, and Hubert's air of restrained boredom disclosed. Vanessa gazed at him now with profound admiration for a second, then pulled herself together, so that when the aloof fiance said a cold good night to her a quarter of an hour later, she stood with her head raised a little haughtily and with the queen-like carriage of figure which was habitual to her.

She never noticed that one any thing else. The evening had been a nightmare. He went into White's on the way home and had a stiff brandy and soda. Some of the men who were there remembered afterward his strange face.

For a bomb shell fell upon London next morning when the papers announced the approaching marriage of "the Right Honorable, the Earl of St. Austel, D. S. O., M. C., and the real and Vanessa, only child of Benjamin Levy, Esquire, of Hawthorne House, Hampstead, and 118 rue de Rasson, Paris." But Hubert had motored down to St. Austel his place in Hampshire, with Colonel Dangerfield early, before even his best friends could ring him up—after reading the news

Vanessa, by in her pink chintz curtained bed, quivering all over with excitement, when her maid brought in the Morning Post—the only journal she was allowed to read. The maid was elderly and French and knew her master's views and played up to his orders. She congratulated her Mademoiselle and assured her golden happiness lay ahead for her, in the role of an English Countess.

And when the romantic child was alone, she kissed Hubert's diamond ring. Of course, he would love her some day when they were married. She knew nothing of men, and Madame de Jarnac had told her, as they went up to bed, that Lord St. Austel was everything that was well bred and aristocratic with no vulgar gush or exhibition of feelings.

"But it is there, Cherie," She smiled with, "You will see," and Vanessa tried to content herself.

Hubert came back from St. Austel on the following day, which was Friday. There was yet another interview with a woman to be gone through.

Tongues Wag for Hours

The Duchess of Lincolnwood would have read the announcement, though, so the worst would be over. She had snatched up the papers for two days, expecting to find the hateful news, but when she did see it on Friday, the pain and chagrin was almost as great as though she had not expected anything. Everyone in London knew who Benjamin Levy was, and numbers of people had received him even in a social way. But a daughter had never been mentioned—and what could have induced Hubert, of all men, to think of such a marriage? Hubert, who was rich and independent, and without a mercenary instinct in him. Hubert, the exclusive aristocrat, who never troubled himself about parvenus!

The eighth Earl of St. Austel to marry a money lender's daughter! Of course, since the war, everything had gone by the board, and there were no barriers—but still! Tongues wagged for hours. And the old Marquis and Marchioness of Hurlshire, and the other aunts and uncles—fortunately few felt it their duty to remonstrate.

His lordship received all their messages when he returned to London on Friday morning. His tact was perfect, and without offending them he made them all understand that he would do what he pleased.

The old Marchioness of Hurlshire shook her gray head and suddenly ceased all opposition.

"There's more in this than meets the eye," she decided, "and perhaps it will be better for Hurlshire not to suspect anything, or he might do something quixotic and ruin us all."

And if she took a stand the rest of the family followed—so all that would go smoothly.

When Lord St. Austel was shown into Alice's sitting room, in the house in upper Brook street, she had had the lights low and a wood fire burning. She looked very lovely and rather woebegone.

"Why Are You Choosing Her?"

Hubert sat down on a chair near, but not on the sofa beside her. He did not speak.

"Well," she asked with a shade of impatience. "Well?" I want to hear all about it. Why—why, Hubert, are you choosing her?"

"She is a very nice girl, who has been brought up away from our delightful world."

Her Grace shrugged her shoulders.

"Is that the reason—or do you love her?"

A whimsical smile came into his eyes.

"Women are always so interested in a man's feeling. May I smoke?"

"Which means that you do love her and are afraid to tell me so. Books if you wish."

"Why should I be afraid, Alice?" He looked her so straight in the face that her haggard eyes fell. She remembered that during the warmest period of their friendship he had never said that sentence—nor addressed women than any other—"I love you." Always he had been Injustice. Sometimes passionate—often indifferent—seldom tender. And she had been obliged to tell herself that he loved her since he came to see her every day and stayed in all the country houses she frequented. She had not brains enough now to pay the part of sympathetic friend, congratulating him on his good fortune and letting him see what he had thrown away by inference. She felt she wanted to question him, although she knew that each moment she was antagonizing him more.

"Let's Shake Hands and Be Friends"

"What is she like—this new love?"

Hubert looked lazy as he leaned back in the chair.

"Dark and very young."

"Is her hair screwed off her face and plaited behind into a bun?" Her light eyes flashed fiercely.

Hubert was startled, but he would not let her see it.

"Yes I believe it is"

Alice subsided into her pillows. "I knew it"; she almost sobbed. "Aid you dared to sit in my opera box on Tuesday night when she was there right under us, and you never even noticed her out in front. No wonder she was gazing in that rapt way at the omnibus box before you joined me." Tears were now in her eyes.

"Here's news." Lord St. Austel was thinking, but he said aloud:

"Don't be dramatic, Alice. Fairest—let's shake hands and be friends."

He bent over and took one of hers. She had not pretty nails, although they were so beautifully polished and he never cared to look at them. But a woman's hands were meant to be kissed—sometimes, even if you had to do it with your eyes shut. So he bent his head and kissed Alice's white, rather hard fingers.

"There, now you know all about it. I am marrying on the fifth of June. Do give me some tea."

A strange marriage and an even stranger home-coming are related in tomorrow's thrilling installment. Be sure to read it.

The Three Graces

DRAWN BY POPINI

Copyright, 1925, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., Great Britain rights reserved.

WHEN you're young and just wading into the sea of life take each step very carefully, so that you may be sure when you reach the deep waters, where you will have to swim on your own, you may have strength and endurance to carry you through. You'll be met on the way by the Three Graces, and if you are wise you will make them your best friends.

Self-Respect, Tolerance and Charm are their names, and if you'll hold them close to your heart all through the stormy sea called "Life" you'll never sink. Self-Respect will teach you dignity and wisdom to deal with your problems. Tolerance will show you thoughtfulness and pity for those surrounding you: Charm will give you the poise and grace and sweetness that will endear you to all you meet. Never lose sight of them.

The three go hand in hand always, and if you lose one you lose all. So keep them close to you to sustain you when the angry waters seem to engulf you, and your dread will always be high above the waters, looking toward the shining goal.

THE RED LACQUER CASE

By Patricia Wentworth

"HERE, man, unlock these damned things for the Lord's sake. That's the key. Where's Sally? Where's Sally, I say?" and then as he swung round to let the inspector get at his wrist, he faced the windows and saw her. She had not stirred. The light showed how white she was. Her eyes looked as if they did not see. The handcuffs dropped with a chatter. Bolster called from the service door, "This way, sir," and Inspector Williams was off hot foot, with a word flung over his shoulder to Mayor entrance. "Take charge here, sir, will you? I can't afford to leave a man."

"There are three of them, all armed." Bill called after him, and he called back: "Thank you, sir, and was gone.

The house seemed full of the sound of trampling feet.

Constable Webbing, meanwhile, had been making his way round the house according to his instructions. He arrived at the back door in time to see at the same moment that the inspector and the other constables burst into the dining room. The door at which he found himself was locked. He walked a pace or two, and reflected that it's was a rum sort of start, and that his young lady, at this moment waiting for him outside the New Cinema, would be what he called "fair worked up."

He had begun to wonder how long it would take him to make his peace when the door behind him was suddenly wrenched open, several persons rushed out, and he felt himself tripped up and knocked sprawling into the gutter. As he picked himself up he heard, from within the house, shouts and a sound of splintering wood. He at once blew his whistle and set off across the garden in pursuit of the people who had knocked him down.

It was Nadine who had thought of Phil Armitage's car, and it was Nadine who had thought of taking the kitchen door behind them to delay pursuit. She ran beside Lazare in the darkness, her hand in her apron pocket clenched on the automatic pistol.

None of the three had spoken after Nadine's one quick whisper. "Armitage's car in the lane! Our only chance!" They ran in silence, and heard the constable's heavy tread behind them, and the piercing sound of his whistle, blown at intervals as he ran.

As they turned into the path between the high box hedges the whistle was answered from nearer the house, and they strained forward, running for their lives. They came through the woodland, and dropped down over the gap whilst the pursuers were still entangled in the unfamiliar windings of the path.

Lazare's eye searched the darkness for the car and found it. He spoke then for the first time in a sharp whisper.

"Nadine, get in," he said. "Gregor, hold them up." He seized the crank handle as he spoke and swung it frantically. There was no response. Again he swung it, and again, but the cold engine would not budge.

The sound of voices and running feet came from beyond the hedge. Gregor's pistol spoke.

"Lazare," Nadine called from the seat, "there's a self-starter. The slope is steep."

Lazare straightened himself, called out rapidly in Russian to Gregor, and jumped in beside Nadine. She released the hand brake. The car began to move with its own weight. Gregor fires again, twice leaped down the gap, and came to them running, panting. The car was sliding forward, slowly at first, but gathering momentum as the slope grew sharper. Gregor jumped for the step, and held to the side of the car. Their pace increased. The gap was behind them. The voices were behind them.

Nadine's foot rose and fell on the self-starter. Lazare switched on the lights. The engine half started, stopped, burred, cheeked, and finally got running some fifty yards down the lane.

Inspector Williams stood in the mud and heard the hum of the car die away in the distance. He was a man of few words. He knew when he was beaten.

He turned in silence and climbed the gap again.

"Back to the house!" he said

When the inspector had released Phil Armitage, and the sound of trampling feet had died away, Sally let go of the curtain and began to cry.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

HOW beautiful is Summer's dress, green leaves on meadow, hill and tree;
slime, oaks whose shade is a caress;
green leaves as far as eye can see.
Bright emerald beds, where rice fields lie, and there a duller, softer green of poplar trees that kiss the sky; again, the willows' tender shade. Green banners of the corn, green grass, and for each leaf its fair design, that the most careless as they pass must needs concede the touch Divine. Green leaves that shelter many a nest from wind and rain and ardent heat, leaves kindly as the mother's breast above young robins, shrill and sweet, Varied in patterns, life and hue, the robes that happy Summer weaves, green leaves of aspens traced on blue and little singing willow leaves.

DAILY SHORT STORY

DROSS OF HER DREAM

By Frank Herbert Sweet

WHEN the girl reached her own door she turned to look back at the sun, which was just sinking behind the cotton mill. But it was a dull, disreputable ball which peered at her through the grimy atmosphere, and she threw out her hands with a sudden revulsion of pent up disgust.

"I ain't my sun," she half sobbed "It's—it's only some cheap thing the factory gits up."

The company used the poorest grade of soft coal. Though its dense smoke had ceased to blacken the sky above the tall chimney it had clogged the moist atmosphere of the mill yard and the cheap, hastily-constructed village in the little bend of the sluggish river.

Saw Her Father

A heavy step approached and she turned to look into her father's easy, good-natured face.

"You 'pears to git ahead of we uns, Nervy," he said, with obvious disapproval in his voice. "I spoke to—Beas comin' out, an' she said you left the fact'ry like you was fired out of a gun. She—they don't like folks to be offish an' onneighborly."

At the name of Bess the girl drew back, flushing hotly.

"I don't care for none of 'em," she retorted drearily. "They're so cheap and trifin'. Oh, Pap, if only we hadn't left the mountain!" She turned abruptly into the cabin, and he followed.

"But it was you as seemed most set on comin', Nervy," he expostulated, as he seated himself on a box and watched her start a fire and set about getting supper. "You said there'd be chances to study an' l'arn to be like folks, an' now," wonder ingly, "here you be homesick a'ready. I didn't care much to come myse f at first, but now I wouldn't go back."

The girl's face hardened a little, but she made no answer. The man drew his box forward to the table and began to eat hungrily, but from time to time raised his eyes furtively to the face opposite.

Couldn't Help It

"Mebbe you'd ought to have mo' comp'ny, Nervy. Tain't very lively with just one man like me in the house an' me mostly out. Now, there's the Grogans, that take boders," shifting his eyes from her direct gaze. "They don't charge but two dollars an' that would leave you mos'n a dollar a week for spendin' money. Of co'se," hastily. "I'd hate to have you go away, but if I 'lowed you was havin' a better time I'd be willin'."

Her lips curled a little.

"Then it's true," she said. "I've been hearin' you was aimin' to marry that gal Beas, an' I reckon I've done said sharp things to folks that hinted it. But I—I couldn't help hit, pappy," her voice breaking suddenly, "with my own mammy dead only five months. If you'd wait a year, I would n't say a word, ah—an' I'd even try to make friends with Beas. Oh, pappy, won't you please wait on mammy's 'count?"

The man shook his head sullenly. Her face again grew hard.

"I s pose it's Beas that's done told you that she an' me can't live in the same house. Well, don't be skeered. Jest whenever she tells you to send me off I—I—" She rose hastily and went to a window, and the man, with an uneasy glance in her direction, picked up his hat and slipped from the room.

Half an hour later she was again standing by the window, her few household duties completed. The doors and the windows of the other cabins along the streets were being gifted for the customary evening gossip and scolding, and at the shrill voices she suddenly dropped the sash.

Presently she noticed a tall, broad-shouldered figure coming along the street, stopping now and then as though to make inquiries. A few moments later a clear, imperative rat-tat sounded through the house, and she went to the door, wondering who it could be.

"Nervy, I am glad to see you."

"Oh, Jake! You here!" Then with a warm flush on her face, she re-entered the room, and he followed.

Jake Comes

There were no chairs, and she motioned him to the larger of the boxes. Then she came and placed her hand familiarly on his shoulder.

"Now, tell me, Jake," she commanded, "whatever brought you 'way off to these parts, an' how's all the folks, an' the farmin', an everything?"

But he only possessed himself of one of her hands, laughing.

"You uns are in a reg'lar hornets' nest of a place," he declared. "I asked for you at one house an' at another an' another, an' though nobody seemed to know you by name, they all wanted to talk an' any something bout somebody else. It was only when I spoke of you as bein' a tall, fine lookin' gal, with square shoulders, that they seemed to know. An' then—whew!"

He paused abruptly, and at that moment a flare through a broad crack in the stove aroused her face. "Nervy," he cried, sharply springing to his feet. "What's the matter? You've been sick, an'—an' yes, you've been cryin'."

"No, no, Jake," she expostulated, smiling and flushing under his anxious gaze. "It's—it s just the loneliness of the place. You don't know—"

"Yes I do know," explosively. "It's the sniffy-eyed deddy. No! I don't mean that. Nervy. But I heered it all comin' along." His face had grown dark, but now it suddenly cleared, and he ended with a laugh. "Anwhow, it's goin' to be,p my plans." He drew her down beside him.

"You 'member that day we parted on the mountain?" he said, with suppressed eagerness in his voice. "You wan't satisfied with our harder way o'livin', an' you 'lowed you loved me, but couldn't marry me 'cause I wa'n't ready to climb up along of you. I'm free to say, Nervy, I didn't feel I could leave the mountains then. I'd been livin' up among 'em an' I loved 'em. I had a nice farm an' was doin' well. So I let you come off alone.

"But I was mistook, Nervy," his voice becoming more earnest and tender. "Just as soon as you was gone, I didn't care any more for the farm an' the mountains. It was you I wanted. So I've come here to climb up with you. I've been to the fact'ry, but there ain't no job for me just now, 'cept tendin' fire in the engine room at ninety cents a day. Tain't much, but mebbe it'll do for a start. I did 'low on waitin' till I could get a little saved up. But now your daddy—is goin' to do what he's going to do, it seems the best thing is for us to get married right at once. You've knowed me since. I was a little feller, an' you know I can be trusted. Will you marry me, Nervy?"

Back To The Farm

She rose swiftly and stood beside him, her eyes shining. He could see the eagerness, the longing in them, even in the dim light.

"You ain't sold nor—nor rented the farm, have you Jake?" she breathed.

"Not yet. It's the wrong time of the year. I just left it in Brother Tom's hands to look out for."

"I'm so glad! Oh, Jake, you can't ever know how glad," she half sobbed. "Yes, I'll marry you, but we won't stay here. We'll go back to we uns mountains an' climb up together there."

And she raised her face to his, transfigured at the thought, and he, almost reverently, bent down and kissed it.

By HELEN ROWLAND

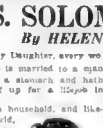
VERILY, my Daughter, every we man who is married to a man is wedded to a stomach and hath signed herself up for a lifejob in its service.

For, lo, the household, and likewise the world, is ruled, not by the iron masculine hand but by the mighty Masculine Stomach.

Behold, there is the Ascetic Stomach which maketh a man to pick at his food and suiff thereat with suspicion. It maketh him refuse the succulent dish, and to sneer scornfully at the pone de resistance wherewith his wife seeketh to tempt his appetite and to invite his supposed soul.

It causeth every dinner to become a lecture on dietetics, and each breakfast to be an hour of analysis and each egg a source of argument.

And there is the Epicurean Stomach, which inspireth its possessor to call for rare and difficult dishes, to invent new recipes, to dream of feasts, and to find flaws and suggest improvements in the cooking, which inclineth him to eat to the point of inertia, which bringeth on the after-dinner headache and the evening coma.



Helen Rowland

And there is the Stomach of the Gourmand, which can NEVER be filled, and which prompteth its owner to snatch his food greedily, to swallow all within sight, and to rob the ice-chest an hour after lunch-eon. Lo, it maketh his wife to blush before company. It leadeth to unspoopoint and sudden death. It is a bottomless pit!

And there is the weak and Dyspeptic Stomach, which calleth for rich viands and cannot resist them, yet suffereth and rebelleth, and filleth the world with gloom and grouches and nightmares and morning-after headaches and vinegar.

Verily, verily, there be fifty-seven varieties of Masculine Stomach, and every one is a different kind of pickle and a separate problem.

For a woman will cheerfully live upon a stale cracker and a cup of tea and dine upon left-overs, but a man must be FED!

And many a grande passion hath withered, and many a beautiful wifely devotion maieth beneath the portentous hoofs of the husband y stomach.

Then, my Daughter, when thou seltest thine heart upon a man see to it that thou lovest him well enough to immolate thyself upon the altar of his appetite.

For, as husband's slogan is always, "Love me, love my Stomach"

VIGOROUS BEAUTY

By Maria Jeritza.

FLABBY muscles and flabby skin are always ugly. This is because flabbiness is a symptom of feebleness and languid lack of vigor.

Actively healthy muscles and skin tissue cannot possibly have the abnormal dead look that we call flabbiness.

The causes of flabby muscles may be general or special or both. A general run-down condition due to nervous strain and lack of sleep or irregular living may cause a relaxed and flabby condition of all the muscles.

Overeating and lack of exercise or tight clothing interfering with circulation may cause the tissues to grow fat, weak and flabby.

Perhaps your health and keep normally active, if you would look and feel fit. Then every muscle should be firm and youthful, provided no actual special causes of flabbiness be present to prevent.

Eat simply, regularly, of wholesome food. Take daily baths. Breathe deeply of fresh air. Get out in the open and exercise until you perspire, whether at golf, tennis, dancing, rowing a boat, or just brisk walking. All this will build up your general health and so make firm flabby muscles.

In addition you will need to avoid certain local causes that may, in your case, result in flabby facial muscles. Avoid nervous twitchings of your mouth. Hold your neck straight. Sleep on a small flat pillow. Wear a shade hat to protect your eyes from the sun.

Don't let your face get too hard because this may loosen the skin and cause your facial muscles to sag. Every night, massage or pat your face downward, but always upward and outward. Patting with the pads of the fingertips, with the effect of raindrops on the face, is the best way to exercise your facial muscles and to apply cold cream. Include the back of your neck in this patting.

Here's one method of firming facial muscles which has often proved successful:

At night, before you retire cleanse your face with cold cream. Next, wring your Turkish washcloth in very hot water and hold it as near your face as you can, so that the warmth will penetrate all the pores of your face and neck. Repeat this application twice, then wash off your face with the cloth. This should remove the dirt and oil just under the skin.

Wash out your cloth, then dip it in cool water and repeat the process of holding it to your face for a few moments.

Now examine your face closely. Wherever crisscross lines show there is starved tissue. Pat in tonoline or some other good skin food

Where there are no wrinkles to show need of skin food, sponge your face with a mild tonic such as lavender water or sea de cologne.

By keeping your health above normal through rest, exercise and mental poise, and by means of sensible care of your skin, you can retain indefinitely the firm, rounded contours of face and body.

SECRETS OF HEALTH

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.
Former President of the American Medical Association.

OF course, the house fly is the chief, because the most dangerous, of Summer pests.

But, in this country, the next greatest pest is the malaria-carrying mosquito.

The importance of this fact was impressed upon me a number of years ago when the Panama Canal was under construction.

One evening, in the bungalow to which I had been billeted, I discovered a man in khaki whom I had not previously met. He was busily writing at a desk, but paused now and then to capture a buzzing mosquito that happened to be ranging around his ears.

"I wonder where these cusits come from!" he finally exclaimed with some irritation as he made a lightning grab at some offender.

"Who is that man?" I later asked Dr. Lister, who was head of the Householdic."

"Don't you know? Why, that's Le Prince—Le Prince the boss mosquito hawk of the Isthmus."

He was indeed the one man to whom the renowned Gorgas had entrusted the all important work of clearing the canal zone of these pestilential insects—the insects that by disseminating malarial fever and yellow fever had defeated all previous efforts to construct the canal.

This same Le Prince is now in charge of the work of the National Malaria Committee, with headquarters at Memphis and is making great headway in clearing the lower Mississippi delta of mosquitoes that have been and are even yet the chief retarding influence to the industrial and commercial development of that section.

It is a difficult problem, but difficulties only stimulate the energy of one with Le Prince's character.

In a recent article dealing with the great problem, which is a problem for every mosquito ridden section of the United States, he says:

"No matter how difficult the problem, in our country at least, there are possible methods of attack, and we shall have less malaria sickness as the simple control methods become better known and are carried out. It is an everyday occurrence today to ignore the malaria mosquitoes gorged with blood and at rest in the patient's room.

"Generally one can slowly approach these resting insects and place a finger within a half inch of them before they will move. If they were destroyed, which is something that can be easily and rapidly done, there would be no malaria carried to the neighbors.

"We can reduce malaria prevalence, even without funds, but we cannot stop its spread if we are not interested. It can be done. It will not be done until each one of us is ready to do his share. The growth of permanent, personal and community interest in this matter is the key to the elimination of malaria from our country."

READING THE CHILD HEART

By Lucy Lowell

PERHAPS after all he hasn't any mother, and that's how all the trouble came about.

At least, if there is a mother, she hasn't been mentioned in the story of what happened when the nine-year-old boy confessed to his father that he had taken ninety dollars worth of valuables from the home of a friend. The father took his son to the police station and ordered his arrest.

Someway or other, you think that the mother ought to be a resource and saved that punishment. It's a way mothers have. Mrs. Alice Adams, of Chicago, writes me about it:

"Dear Lucy Lowell:

"You say about the boy who took the jewelry greatly impressed me. My son, when he was seven years old, brought me a small gross and gold rings worth about ten cents, proudly stating that it was a present for me. Upon questioning him, I learned he had taken it from a store.

"There was a problem for me. His object was not to steal, but to make me happy with a present. If I told his father, I knew he would be severely punished. So I went with him to the store. I made him explain to the man what he had done. The man told him about the punishment meted out to thieves and secured his promise never to do such a thing again.

"He is a splendid lad, twenty-three years old now. Your story brought back that incident to us both and he said after reading it: 'Mother, I never forgot what a good pal you were.' You understood my motive in stealing, also how hard and humiliating it would be to confess my guilt to the store man. Ever after that, when troubled, I knew mother would think the right way out."

"And my boy's father would have acted just as Ross Biddison's father did.

"MRS. ALICE ADAMS."

As I said before, mothers have a knack of thinking the right way out for their children.

However it was not altogether as a mother, but partly as a fair-minded individual, that Mrs. Adams inquired into the reason for her little boy's error. She found that he didn't want the trinket he had taken for himself, so there was neither covetousness nor greed in his heart. He didn't want it for himself, so he wasn't even selfish.

But he did want to express his love for mother and make her happy by giving her a present. However wrong the action, it sprang from a noble motive.

I wonder how many parents bother to find out the REASON for their children's offenses before fixing their punishment?

ROMANTIC HUSBAND

A Sequel to "Ways of a Husband"

By Anne Lisle

I BELAME certain that they had been given orders by Park orders to summon him to the telephone no matter who was asked for. Though it was an undignified thing to do, I had no choice. I looked straight at Hodkins and demanded:

"Were any of those telephone messages for me?"

You may go, Hodkins. I shall ring if I need you or Prudence," said Park queerly but with an authority there was no denying, "and please continue to carry out my orders about all telephone calls."

Then Park leaned over and put his hand on mine.

"Anne," he said quietly. "It was by my orders that Hodkins called me to the telephone in answer to any and all messages."

"How dare you?" I began angrily. But Park broke in with a quiet:

"Do you question my devotion, my loyalty and affection?"

"I question your judgment—and your fairness to Jim," I answered quietly.

"Anne," Jeanie pleaded in a nervous voice, "won't you please listen to Park or to Mr. Tremaine? You must let someone wise and sane guide you now. You can't ruin your life now. Jim has hurt you enough. He has neglected and shamed you. I am his sister and I tell you that Jim isn't worth your standing by."

"Do you remember when my brother Neal disappeared and sixty thousand dollars went with him?" I asked curtly. "I stood by Neal then. I would be ashamed to face myself if I could desert Jim now. I know Neal was innocent then. I know Jim is innocent now. Are any of you accusing Jim Harrison of—murder?"

"Anne!" screamed Jeanie. "Don't—don't use that word!"

"You've tried Jim in advance—and condemned him," I said coldly. "Now don't think at a word. Words don't matter. Either Brooke De Courcey killed herself or her brother did away with her, as he would not have scrupled to do away with Lucie when she stood between him and his ambition to see Brooke exploited as star of the Revue. Brooke failed.

"The rich haul of jewels this Basil-Barry person tried to get here proved to be paste. And then Barry turned on Brooke. It's clear enough. Don't you all see? Doesn't anyone see?"

I turned to Mabel. Her face wore a pitying smile. Jeanie had put her head in her arms and was sobbing openly. Park was frowning—thinking, thinking. Johnny got up and began to walk up and down the room. Lucie ran to my side.

"Do you love Jim—so much?" she cried. "You wonderful, wonderful woman! If you want Jim as much as that I'll perjure my soul to save him for you."

I took her hand and faced the others.

For a moments I could feel them all swaying to me—yielding their judgment to mine. Then Johnny Tremaine laughed raucously as he said:

"Listen, Anne, you can't account for the way Jim looked when he turned up at the theatre after the show last night. You can't account for the way he ignored us all when he came skulking to Hawley's after you and couldn't even face us to congratulate Lucie on her triumph."

I felt Lucie's fingers grow limp and step away from mine. Then she caught up Johnny's words with a brusque:

"And Jim didn't go with you to the hotel. He left you before you got there. I've heard. Bert telephoned me. And the night they thought they saw poor Basil skulking in the alleyway and found the blue glass, it was wrapped in one of Jim's handkerchiefs. Bert saw the monogram. We all recognized its mate in Jim's pocket last night."

The boil must have rung while she was speaking. I did not realize that someone else had come into the room until I heard Matt Hawley's voice quavering up.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

"Who is that man?" I later asked Dr. Lister, who was head of the household.

"Don't you know? Why, that's Le Prince—Le Prince the boss mosquito hawk of the Isthmus."

He was indeed the one man to whom the renowned Gorgas had entrusted the all important work of clearing the canal zone of these pestilential insects—the insects that by disseminating malarial fever and yellow fever had defeated all previous efforts to construct the canal.

This same Le Prince is now in charge of the work of the National Malaria Committee, with headquarters at Memphis and is making great headway in clearing the lower Mississippi delta of mosquitoes that have been and are even yet the chief retarding influence to the industrial and commercial development of that section.

It is a difficult problem, but difficulties only stimulate the energy of one with Le Prince's character.

In a recent article dealing with the great problem, which is a problem for every mosquito infested section of the United States, he says:

"No matter how difficult the problem in our country, we know what are possible methods of attack, and we shall have less malaria sickness as the simple control methods become better known and are carried out. It is an everyday occurrence today to ignore the malaria mosquitoes spread with blood and at rest in the patient's room.

"Generally one can slowly approach these restless insects and place a finger within a half inch of them before they will move. If they were destroyed, which is something that can be easily and rapidly done, there would be no malaria carried to the neighbors.

"We can reduce malaria prevalence, even without funds, but we cannot stop its spread if we are not interested. It can be done. It will not be done until each one of us is ready to do his share. The growth of permanent, personal and community interest in this matter is the key to the elimination of malaria from our country."

READING THE CHILD HEART

By Lucy Lowell

PERHAPS after all, he hasn't any mother, and that's how all the trouble came about.

At least, if there is a mother, she hasn't been mentioned in the story of what happened when the nine-year-old boy confessed to his father that he had taken ninety dollars' worth of valuables from the home of a friend. The father took his son to the police station and ordered his arrest.

Somewhere or other, you think that the mother would have stepped in and saved that punishment. It's what Jane Addams of Chicago, writes me about it:

"Dear Lucy Lowell:

"Your story about the boy who took the jewelry greatly interested me. My sister, who for many years old, brought me a small green and gold Japan worth about ten cents, proudly stating that it was a present for me. Upon questioning him, I learned he had taken it from a store.

"There was a problem for me. His object was not to steal, but to make me happy with a present. If I told him frankly I knew he would be severely punished. So I went with him to the store. I made him explain to the man what he had done. The man told him about the punishment meted out to thieves and received his promise never to do such a thing again.

"He is a splendid lad, twenty-three years old now. Your story brought back that incident to us both and he said after reading it: 'Mother, I never forgot what a good pal you were. You understood my motive in stealing, also how hard and humiliating it would be to confess my guilt to the store man. Ever after that, when troubled, I knew mother would think the right way out.'

"And my boy's father would have acted just as Ross Biddison's father did.

"MRS. ALICE ADAMS."

As I said before, mothers have a knack of thinking the right way out for their children.

However it was not altogether as a mother, but partly as a fair-minded individual, that Mrs. Adams inquired into the reason for her little boy's error. She found that he didn't want the trinket he had taken for himself, so there was neither covetousness nor greed in his heart. He didn't want it for himself, so he wasn't even selfish.

But he did want to express his love for mother and make her happy by giving her a present. However wrong the action, it sprang from a noble motive.

I wonder how many parents bother to find out the REASON for their children's offenses before fixing their punishment?

SMART SAYINGS OF CLEVER CHILDREN

The Boston Evening American will pay $1 for published smart sayings. Address "Smart Sayings," Boston Evening American.

A two-year-old boy had been given a small piece of chewing gum by one of the children. When his mother found he had it she took it away from him. He didn't say anything, but Afterwards he asked where it was and his mother said he had lost it; so when he went out to play he saw a girl chewing gum and he stepped up and said, "Aggie, did you find my gum?"

ROMANTIC HUSBAND

By Anne Lisle

I BECAME certain that they had been given orders by Park orders to summon him to the telephone no matter who was asked for. Though it was an undignified thing to do, I had no choice. I looked straight at Hodkins and demanded:

"Were any of those telephone messages for me?"

You may go, Hodkins. I shall ring if I need you or Prudence," said Park quietly but with an authority there was no denying. "and please continue to carry out my orders about all telephone calls."

Then Park leaned over and put his hand on mine.

"Anne," he said quietly. "It was by my orders that Hodkins called me to the telephone in answer to any and all messages."

"How dare you?" I began angrily. But Park broke in with a quiet:

"Is you question my devotion, my loyalty and affection?"

"I question your judgment—and your fairness to Jim," I answered quietly.

"Anne," Jeanie pleaded in a nervous voice, "won't you please listen to Park or to Mr. Tremaine? You must let someone wise and sane guide you now. You can't rule your life now. Jim has hurt you enough. He has neglected and shamed you. I am his sister and I tell you that Jim isn't worth your standing by."

"Do you remember when my brother Neal disappeared and sixty thousand dollars went with him? I asked curtly. "I stood by Neal then. I would be ashamed to face myself if I could desert Jim now. I know Neal was innocent then. I know Jim is innocent now. Are any of you accusing Jim Harrison of—murder?"

"Anne!" screamed Jeanie. "Don't—don't use that word!"

"You've tried Jim in advance—and condemned him," I said coldly. "Now don't think at a word. Words don't matter. Either Brooke Du Cournay killed herself or her brother did away with her, as he would not have scrupled to do away with Lizzie when she stood between him and his ambition to see Brooke exploited as star of the flavine. Brooke failed.

"The rich haul of jewels this Basil Harry person tried to get here proved to be paste. And then Brooke turned on Brooks. He died smoking. Don't you all see? Doesn't anyone see?"

I turned to Mabel. Her face wore a paying smile. Jeanie had put her head in her arms and was sobbing quietly. Park was frowning—thinking, thinking. Johnny got up and began to walk up and down the room. Lizzie ran to me aside.

"Do you love Jim—so much?" she cried. "You wonderful, wonderful woman! If you want Jim as much as you say I'll perjure my soul to save him for you."

I took her hand and faced the others.

For a moment I could feel them all sagging in me—stealing their judgment to mine. Then Park Tremaine laughed ruefully as he said:

"Listen, Anne you can't account for the way Jim looked when he turned up at the theatre after the show last night. You can't account for the way he ignored us all when he came skulking to Hawley's after you and couldn't even face us to congratulate Lizzie on her triumph."

I felt Lizzie's fingers grow limp and drop away from mine. Then she caught up Johnny's words with a brusque:

"And Jim didn't go with you to the hotel. He left you before you got there. I've heard. Bert telephoned me. And the night they thought they saw poor Basil skulking in the alleyway and found the blue glass, it was wrapped in one of Jim's handkerchiefs. Bert saw the monogram. We all recognized us mate in Jim's pocket last night."

The bell must have rung while she was speaking. I did not realize that someone else had come into the room until I heard Matt Hawley's voice quavering out.

KRAZY KAT GETS FAN LETTERS

Who do you suppose walked into the Radio Room of the Boston Evening American this morning?

Why, the Boston Evening American's Krazy Kat and little old Ignatz the Mouse!

The Radio Editor was working away at the desk, and heard a funny little noise—a sort of scratchy little noise on the floor. So he looked around and there, if you please, was Krazy Kat, and holding on to hands with him was that little old Ignatz!

"Good morning, Krazy Kat," said the Radio Editor. "Won't you and Ignatz sit down? I am so very, very glad to see you."

Krazy Kat was all dressed up. He had on a brand new, red necktie and his hair was all brushed and he looked very grand. Ignatz looked sort of seared, and the Radio Editor saw right away that the little rascal had a brick hidden under his arm.

KRAZY KAT IS BUSY.

"No, thank you sir," said Krazy Kat, "I am very busy this morning and we haven't much time, but I wanted to show you some letters that I got from some of the boys and of my little friends. They are such nice letters, and I'm so proud of them that I just had to bring them to show you." So he said this the Krazy Kat pulled out a little pocket book and took out of it some letters he had received from the Radio Editor to read. The Radio Editor began to read them, and this is the first one:

Dear Krazy Kat:

I want to belong to the club. I like the color to be blue and the flower a blue-bell.

I am nine years old, my birthday is on the 21st of August. My name is Dorothy Sherman. My address is No. 20 Greendale road. My little brother, who is seven years old would like to belong too. His birthday is January 2.

Your friend,

DOROTHY SHERMAN.

Dorchester.

"What a nice little letter" said the Radio Editor, "have you got one more?"

ANOTHER NICE LETTER.

"O, yes," said Krazy Kat proudly, "here's another just as nice."

So the Radio Editor read that one, too, and here it is:

Dear Krazy Kat:

I want orange and green and red for the flower for the colors, also the flower a large yellow dahli—also my birthday is the 29th of septem ber.

BARBARA.

Halifax, Mass.

"Goodness, Krazy Kat," said the Radio Editor, "what nice little let ters!" I should think that you would be very proud to get such nice letters.

"I am very proud," said Krazy Kat, "that is why I brought them to show you. Now I must be going—come along Ignatz."

IGNATZ WON'T GO.

"No," said that naughty Ignatz, "I like it here, and I won't go!"

So Krazy Kat grabbed hold of Ignatz, and Ignatz pulled and pulled, and dropped his brick, and Krazy Kat had to just pull him out of the door!

The Radio Editor hopes that Krazy Kat will come in again and bring some more letters. If he does, we will tell all about it in the Boston Evening American. Because, you see, Krazy Kat belongs to the Boston Evening American, and of course he comes here to tell about what the letters he has from his little girls and boys.

RADIO in 50 lessons by "The DOCTOR"

Tuned Circuits

A tuned circuit, in the familiar eye of the radio engineer, consists of a coil and a condenser. Where accurate calculations are to be made, the inductance value of the coil is known in advance. Where the experiments call for any variation in wavelength, the condenser is of the variable type. Let us take for example a coil of two turns of wire, and a condenser made up of about three plates. This may be regarded as circuit number one. Now let us consider a coil containing say four turns of wire and a five plate condenser. This will be circuit number two. It stands to reason that a highly vibrating current such as is used in radio, will take longer to traverse circuit number two than it would to cover circuit number one. For this reason it isn't very hard to prove that the bigger the circuit the fewer times per second it will be able to vibrate.

WEEKLY TALK ON CANNING AND PRESERVING

I HAVE not forgotten that I promised to give you recipes for pickling and preserving watermelon rind today, so we will start right off with these:

RECIPE NO. 1471
PICKLED WATERMELON RIND.

One pound of watermelon rind boiled in a brine made from 1 quart of water and ¼ cup of salt ,for 15 minutes. Drain well and dip into a cold bath until the flavor of salt is gone. Drain carefully and stand over night in lime water, in the proportion of 2 ounces of lime to 1 gallon of water. Drain the next morning and cook rapidly in a syrup made by boiling together 1 pound of sugar, 1 pint of water, 1 pint of vinegar, 1 teaspoon each of cloves, cinnamon, allspice, and ½ teaspoonful of mace. Cook until rind becomes clear and transparent. Cool before packing; process in pint jars 15 minutes at 180° F. (simmering), and seal.

The next question is—should the brine for carrots be hot or cold?

It should be cold.

Next comes a request for a recipe for crisp, sweet cucumber pickles.

SWEET CUCUMBER PICKLES.

Select small cucumbers. Wash, sprinkle with salt and cover with cold water. Use a generous cup of salt to a gallon of water. Next day drain off the brine; rinse the cucumber in cold water and pack into fruit jars. Sprinkle through the jars some black or white mustard seed and a few pieces of horseradish, ginger root and strips of green or red peppers. Green nasturtium seeds are also a good addition to sweet cucumber pickles. Heat the vinegar scalding hot and sweeten to taste. Cover the pickles with the vinegar solution and seal the jars. As you have sterilized them before putting the cucumbers in, your pickles will keep indefinitely. If you want a very bright green pickle, put grape or cabbage leaves over and under the cucumbers, and instead of covering with cold water and salt, scald the water with the salt and pour over the cucumbers boiling hot; then next day go on just as I have directed you.

Or you may like this recipe.

WATERMELON PRESERVES

small pieces, discarding the small pieces, discarding the seed part. The pieces may be cut into cubes or may be squares about 1½ inches long. Cover and rinse with cold water to which a little table salt has been added (a table spoon of salt to a quart of water) and let stand oven night. Next day drain and rinse the watermelon rind in good many times in cold water, and then set to cook in soiling water. When tender and transparent, and yet whole, set to drain in colander. Take ¾ of a pound of sugar, ½ ounce ginger root and 1 lemon for each pound of a prepared rind; slice the lemon and discard the seeds; slice the ginger root and cook it separately in boiling water until tender. Make a syrup of the sugar and water which you have drained from the lemon and ginger, bring to a boil, skim it, and then add watermelon rind, and cook until pieces look plump and full of syrup. Skim out the rind and put into jars and then add syrup which you have cooked with the rind to the rest of the syrup. Add pieces of lemon and ginger and the syrup cook until thick, then use it to fill the jars. Glass or earthern jars can be used for storing this preserve.

Next comes—

PRESERVED WATERMELON RIND.

1 pound of melon rind.
1 pound of sugar.
1 lemon.
1 ounce of lime.
2 quarts of water.

Cut the rind into 1-inch squares, remove peel and all pink part, and weight. Soak over night in lime water (1 ounce of lime to 2 quarts of water). This lime may be secured from a drug store. Next morning allow the rind to stand for 2 hours in clear water. Drain well, then drop into boiling water and boil rapidly for 10 minutes. Drain again and add gradually to the syrup made by boiling together 2 cupfuls of sugar and 1 quart of water. Add to this the juice of ½ lemon and three extra slices of lemon. Cook until the melon is tender and transparent. Allow to stand covered with the syrup until cold; arrange the pieces attractively in the jars, garnishing with slices of lemon. Cover with a heavy sugar syrup (testing 30 to 35°). Process and seal.

BEDTIME STORY

WHY THE FROGGIE GLEE CLUB WAS BROKEN UP

By Foxy Grandpa

HAVE you ever heard a real frog concert? I don't mean just some old bullfrogs croaking in a pond with their children and grandchildren tuning in occasionally. But have you sat in a garden where the tree frogs hold their annual convention of musicians?

I am quite sure that I have. And I will tell you about it.

It was out in California, at a friend's beautiful home up on the top of a mountain overlooking the Pacific that I had this experience.

The gardens were more lovely than anything you can imagine, and we were in the habit of sitting out on the terrace in the sunshine during the day and in the evening after dinner. Then someone would always say:

"Isn't this peaceful?"

Peaceful? It was the most peaceful spot on earth until one evening when the convention started.

They all didn't arrive at once. But in less than a week when all of the delegates had arrived and each evening as it grew dark they started their chorus, we decided that they were neither cheerful nor cute.

"We'll have to get rid of them," said our host, and then everyone started making suggestions. It was indeed a problem and finally the gentleman sat down to write a letter to Washington to the Department of Agriculture to see how we could get the frogs to hold their convention elsewhere.

But we were a long way from Washington and the weeks waiting for a reply would not be very pleasant.

Bunny, of course, was interested in this situation and suddenly one evening, he jumped up and disappeared. And that little rabbit didn't come home until morning. I didn't say anything. I thought he might be calling on some jack-rabbit friends. But as it turned out he hadn't seen anybody with long ears. But he had seen something with a very long tail.

"I don't think the concert will be as loud as usual tonight," said Bunny, crunching a radish.

"Good news," we shouted. "Why do you think that?"

I've made an arrangement with a fellow to frighten them off," replied Bunny. "In fact, it was entirely agreeable to him. He said he was looking forward to it with great pleasure,

"Good boy," I said to Bunny, and gave him another radish.

We went out to sit on the terrace and all of a sudden, one of the ladies jumped up on a chair and cried:

"Oh—I saw a great big rat run right into that flowerbed."

Bunny pulled my trouser leg and said:

"Tell her to keep calm. That rat has no interest in her. He has his mind on one thing only—frogs."

"That's the fellow who's going to break up the concert, is he?"

"The ones he can't eat, he'll scare off," said Bunny. People are not the only ones who consider frogs legs a delicacy."

U. S. 'DOPE' WAR CENTERED ON NEW YORK

Washington, Aug. 6 (I.N.S.)—A nation-wide survey of the dope traffic, details of which were made public today by Colonel L. G. Nutt, head of the narcotic division of the prohibition unit, disclosed heavy smuggling through New York.

Smuggling is chiefly charged to crews of arriving European liners. Wiping out of rum row put a damper on seaboard has not appreciably lessened dope smuggling, according to the authorities, who state that rum runners do not fraternize with narcotic smugglers.

After presenting a picture of the illegitimate use of narcotics in General L. C. Andrews, prohibition czar, Colonel Nutt declared the reorganized dry machine should lend strong co-operation in suppression of the traffic.

Nutt's division will not be affected by the prohibition reorganization. Reports throughout the country indicate smuggling from Canada and Mexico has been checked somewhat.

Sufficient facilities will be put at Nutt's disposal by Andrews to make a concerted drive on the dope smugglers in New York and in other cities where investigations of conspiracies to violate the Harrison anti-narcotic act are in progress.

Nutt said the recent treaty with Canada brought excellent co-operation from that government.

ITALIAN LODGE FIGHT NOW IN COURT

New York, Aug. 6 (A.P.)—An injunction halting the proceedings to remove Supreme Court Justice Salvatore A. Cotillo, grand master of the Grand Lodge of the Sons of Italy and the other grand officers of the order, pending the settlement by the courts of the dispute between the Grand Lodge and the Supreme Lodge of the order, has been granted by Supreme Court Justice Levy.

Justice Levy's action throws into the district court for settlement the bitter fight between the followers of Justice Cotillo and the followers of Grand Master Giovanni Di Silvestro and the Supreme Lodge, who is accused by Cotillo's supporters of sympathy with the Fascisti and of an attempt to align the organization with Mussolini's supporters in this country.

Justice Cotillo and his fellow officers were to have been tried by the Supreme Lodge on charges June 27 but the trial has been held up pending Justice Levy's decision. The trial the Supreme Lodge officers will not now take place.

FRENCH DEBT BOARD TO COME IN SEPTEMBER

Paris, Aug. 6 (A.P.)—It is now virtually settled that the French mission which is to go to the United States to arrange a settlement of France's war debt will leave for Washington during the first fortnight of September. The French government has decided to treat the debt settlements with Great Britain and the United States as two distinct and separate undertakings, and that whatever might be the stage of the negotiations opened ten days ago at London between France and England in early September the French mission will proceed to the United States.

CONSECRATE SHRINE IN SHENANDOAH MOUNTAINS

Orkney Springs, Va., Aug. 6 (A.P.)—Consecration ceremonies for the shrine of th eTransfiguration, an edifice of native unhewn stone, erected on the heights of the Shenandoah mountains to the memory of prominent clergymen and laymen of the Episcopal Church in Virginia, drew a large assembly of church representatives here today. The stone shrine, standing 2,400 feet above sea level, has a companile of the same material, with a sacristy, rock-roofed, on the same ground level and on the third tier a bleicony with a one hundred pound bell. A cross of rough stone surmounts the whole edifice.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

Buy New England goods — support New England industries — best in the world.

Let Uncle Sam's Strong Arm Probe Telephone Monopoly

Buncombe about better telephone service is abroad in Greater Boston today. More buncombe of the same sort will doubtless be peddled throughout New England in the days ahead.

The Boston Evening American has neither the wish nor the heart to dash a hope for better telephone service that springs eternal in the heart of telephone subscribers, much less to discourage the aspiration in any quarter to give the public a telephone service that will improve with each day and not merely with each succeeding jack-up of telephone rates.

Hush-darlings regarding the personal integrity of the members of the Massachusetts Public Service Commission are as thick around Boston today as leaves in Vallambrosa. These, too, will doubtless be whispered in the days ahead from city to town and town to country and State to State throughout the New England neighborhood.

The Boston Evening American is not assailing the personal integrity of the Members of the Massachusetts Public Service Commission. In the absence of convincing evidence to the contrary the personal integrity of public officials entrusted by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts with great power and authority is assumed.

But this is supposed to be a government of laws and not of men, and all its officials are judged, and rightly, by their record of achievement and not by their harmless intentions or their engaging personalities.

Better telephone service is not now the main issue. The personal integrity of the Commission, which handed out to the Telephone monopoly an increase in rates running up into the millions, is not now the issue.

This buncombe about the one and these hush-darlings about the other are only red herrings drawn across the trail for the sole purpose of luring Public Sentiment from the trail, which Public Sentiment is hitting, as fast as the people grasp the full significance of the most astounding decision ever made by the Public Service Commission of this or any other New England State.

Thanks to His Honor the Mayor of Boston an appeal has been entered at Washington for an investigation by the Interstate Commerce Commission of the telephone situation in all of the ramifications over which the Federal law gives the Commission jurisdiction. Boston's corporation counsel, Mr. E. Mark Sullivan, went to Washington to file the appeal in person by order of the Mayor.

Thanks to His Excellency the Governor of Massachusetts the Public Service Commission has been officially called upon to explain some of the more astounding and mystifying portions of its most astounding and mystifying decision. Its reply Governor Fuller is now trying, in the language of the liturgy, to "read, mark, learn and inwardly digest."

To Governor Fuller and to Mayor Curley this newspaper says, "More power to the elbow of each of you."

For Governor Fuller and for Mayor Curley this newspaper calls for the support of a Public Sentiment that is already aroused and that should not allow itself to be lulled into a sense of false security, much less hoodwinked by buncombe about "better service," or hush darlings regarding the integrity, amiability or neighborliness of public personalities.

Now is the time and Massachusetts is the place for Public Sentiment to support the hands of those public servants who demand that the Federal Government, through the Interstate Commerce Commission, shall take a hand in a situation that the arm of a single State is neither long enough to reach, nor strong enough, alone and unaided, to grapple with.

Please, Mr. President

Couldn't You Keep Us Out of This?

It seems that we are to enter the League Court if that can be forced upon us by those that know as little of Europe as they do of history.

You learn that England and France do not intend to be controlled by any World Court or League of Nations, either. The poor old League has become a joke in France and England.

France reserves the right to live up to her duty toward Poland, which means the right to invade Germany if Germany ever tries to take back her lands given to Poland. England reserves, as usual, all rights, and wisely. Her people don't allow themselves to be tied up in advance.

Why, President Coolidge, must WE mix up in that? Are we not doing pretty well? What questions of importance to this country would you NOW submit to a court nine-tenths European and ONE-TENTH AMERICAN?

Not one, of course. Then why enter the League Court arrangement that would hold us in honor-bound to abide by the decisions of a court inevitably packed against us, dominated by nationalities whose only binding tie is their hatred of the United States?

To Avoid the Knife

Eat Carefully—Hear McGraw

Mussolini, only forty-two years old last week, is threatened with an operation for ulcers in the duodenum, the short intestine into which food passes directly from the stomach.

Such ulcers—they killed Napoleon—afflict men that eat CARELESSLY, too rapidly, thinking while they eat, and using their brains intensely immediately after eating.

If Mussolini every morning would take half a pint of carefully soured milk, one egg, a cup of weak tea—nothing else—no luncheon but cooked fruit, a light dinner, no late supper and chew every MOUTHFUL CAREFULLY he might cure himself without the help of a surgeon's knife.

Is diet important for young or old? M. W. Corum, formerly of the New York Times, now a brilliant writer on the New York Evening Journal, tells you that McGraw, manager of the New York baseball Giants, knows every day what every one of his players eats.

To one young pitcher "shelved off the mound in one inning" McGraw said sarcastically: "Maybe sardines, watermelon and milk for lunch don't agree with you." The young man took the hint.

LISTEN, WORLD!

Reg. U. S. Patent Office

By Elsie Robinson.

THE Chinese baby lay kicking in the sun. Her eyes dawned like black lambs in the creamy oval of her tiny face, from the scarlet button of her mouth came gurgles of delight.

Her dress was a scrap of brocade, embroidered with embroidered butterflies and flowers of azure, jade and ochre. Her ears turned up like the petals of a flaming lily, and there were tassels of rabbit fur at the ears. A merry baby in an altogether joyful world.

Then came an old wrinkled woman with strips of linen in her hands. She took the soft, new feet and held them so they could not dance upon the ambrosia. She bent the toes down until they crumpled into the flesh like broken buds.

Then she wrapped a fold of linen bandage about the foot, from heel to toe, and drew it tight. The baby whimpered, but the gnarled, yellow fingers did not stop. Tighter and tighter they drew the bandage until the little feet seemed only shapeless, wrapped knobs. Then she stopped.

All night the baby cried—all day it plucked at the cruel wrappings. But there was no loosening. Again the old woman came. Again the feet were wrapped, still tighter. Days passed—weeks, months and years. The agonizing pain ceased at last but the bandages remained.

Dressed for Bridal Day

At last they dressed the young girl for her bridal day. She was brilliant as a piece of cloisonne, fragrant as a pomegranate flower. Indeed she was part mummy. Beneath the wee, jeweled slippers which adorned her feet were two deformed misshapen lumps of flesh too horrible to be viewed by human eyes.

They were no longer feet. She could not walk, or run, dance or leap. They led her tottering across the floor, her hands on the support of the shoulder of her servants. She had become a "lily-foot" woman—a poor, perverted little toy, unfit for joy or use.

This is a picture from old China. It is a revolting picture, isn't it? Yet in every town in the United States today, other lives are being bound by old, gnarled hands—other spirits are being twisted and deformed.

We Americans do not bind with linen strips. We bind with what the psychologists call DOMINATION. AND DOMINATION, says the psychologists, does to the mind and character what the cruel bandages of China did to the baby feet. It cripples, stunts, dwarfs and prevents the every hand we see it—

Bind With Domination.

The child who is dominated "for its own good" by its parents—

The husband who is dominated by his wife—

The wife who is dominated by the husband—

The mother-in-law who dominates her son's or daughter's family—

The young people who dominates the old father or mother—

The sisters who are dominated by sisters—

The brothers who are dominated by brothers—

All of them trying to shape up other lives. All of them struggling to make other lives conform to their standards. All of them meddling and boasting, criticizing and interfering, punishing and taunting — drawing the bonds of domination tighter and tighter about the grow ing spirit until the original shape and trend of that spirit has been entirely lost.

Then shouldn't we ever guide other people—even little children? Yes, we must often guide. It is not possible to do away with all domination. But it IS possible to do away with about nine-tenths of it. Even little children should be helped to make their own decisions, rather than forced to adopt yours.

MOST OF OUR MODERN SORROW AND VICE IS CAUSED BY THE FACT THAT WE'VE HAD "LILY-FOOT" IDEALS OF SPIRITUAL BEAUTY.

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

THE servant problem in the country is getting worse all the time. Maids are now about as permanent as traveling salesmen.

THEY accept the job in the morning, come in the afternoon and leave in the evening.

SOME girls don't even stay long enough to take their hats off.

THEY cook the dinner with their coats on.

THEY hood a frying pan in one hand and a time table in the other.

IT isn't a question any more of whether you'll like the maid, it's whether the maid will like you.

A LONG ISLAND woman always keeps two servants. One in the house and one at the station.

IN the country it's even difficult to keep a policeman in your kitchen.

THE cooks even keep the cops guessing.

IT'S getting so that a man has to marry a cook if he wants to hold her.

AND then he can't always depend upon her staying.

ONE woman has been in the country since July and she's had to break in a new maid every morning.

SHE'S got them coming on every train.

NO matter when you go down to the station you can always pick up somebody's cook.

IF you get theirs it doesn't make any difference, they'll get yours.

BUT a cook in the kitchen is worth two at the depot.

ONE society dame was having a big party the other evening and she had to break her maid's leg to keep her from walking out.

THE average cook arrives twenty minutes after lunch and leaves fifteen minutes before dinner.

THERE'S only one way to solve the servant problem. Give your home to the maid and then go and work for her.

Three Minute Journeys

By Temple Manning

THE time has passed when men offered sacrifices to the gods in civilized countries. But there is one custom that still persists, and probably will persist as long as there are sailors upon the sea and ships cross the equator.

For the sailor is at heart romantic, and he clings to the age-old customs which generations of sailors before him have practised. One of these customs is that of paying tribute to Old Father Neptune at the crossing of the equator. When this famous point is reached, every person on board, whether member of the crew or passenger, must take part in the ceremony.

The evening before the line is reached there is supposed to be a hail from Neptune. He challenges the ship to produce all on board who have never crossed the equator on the following day for his inspection. At the proper moment on the next day the novices are gathered together. Then Neptune, with his Amphitrite and suite, appears at the side of the ship and comes aboard over her bow. He is preceded by a young man dressed very fashionably and he rides on a gun carriage drawn by six almost naked negroes, spotted in yellow. His long beard of oakum, an iron crown which decks his head, and the trident with a dolphin between its prongs, make him most impressive. He is, of course, a member of the crew, as are his companions.

The novices are blindfolded, shaved, painted, and then thrown backward into a tub of water which has been prepared for the purpose.

Games and theatricals follow the ceremony. Neptune presents his good wishes to the ship and its crew and departs, to reappear as himself.

VALUE OF THE ONE WHO APPRECIATES

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THE one who appreciates and the one who creates are partners in the production of greatness.

Chaliapin says when he sings the Volga Boat Song in a concert he closes his eyes and dreams of his youth, back in Russia. The hand-clapping and the "Bravos!" when he has ended always surprise him, he says. He has been living in another world.

He produces art. But if those in the audience were not able to appreciate art they might have thrown things while he had his eyes closed!

Soon after one of his concerts in New York an East Side theatre put on an amateur night. One of the numbers was a violinist. He began with the beautiful melody, "O Promise Me." The house went into a pandemonium of jeers and catcalls. They wanted jazz bands and black-faced comedians.

In each case the artist gave his best. In one the audience was capable of appreciation. In the other it was not.

Lawrence Tibbett sang before the Metropolitan audience as Ford in Falstaff. He received a fifteen-minute ovation.

A hard-boiled officer in the Navy a few years before had heard him singing with the same voice and sent someone to "tell that kid to shut up that noise."

The poet Woodsworth composed much of his greatest poetry aloud as he walked in the country. The farmers declared disgustedly that he was "always booing about."

A witty saying requires two—one to think it up and the other to understand it.

Also a keen intellect must have someone capable of understanding it if it is to produce its best.

A sending station is useless if there is no receiving station.

Both the upper and lower teeth are necessary to each other.

The hook is of little value without the eye.

So the appreciator is necessary to the producer of fine things.

STAGGERING MOTION OF THE MOON

By Garrett P. Serviss

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

A READER asks how astronomers calculated that a recent famous eclipse of the sun would occur at a particular second on a particular day, and how it happened that the calculation was two or three seconds out of the way.

Only the principle underlying the calculation can be shown here, but that may be made sufficiently clear without going into details. If the motion of the moon in its revolution around the earth were perfectly regular the calculation of an eclipse would be only a matter of counting hours, minutes and seconds in advance.

Great Variety

But the motion of the moon is subjected to a great variety of disturbing influences, called perturbations. At one time it is hastened, at another time retarded.

Now the moon is pulled a little one way out of its path, and now a little another way. And not only is its motion in its orbit variable, but the orbit itself swings around with a movement that is not regular.

This is as if the elliptical track of a race course, instead of being fixed immovably to the soil, were to revolve slowly about the centre of the field, so that the position of the extreme ends would continually change with respect to the starter's tower.

Kepler discovered that the planets revolve around the sun in ellipses, and the moon also revolves in an ellipse around the earth; but these ellipses are all distorted in form by the various perturbations. Only on the average does either a planet or the moon travel in an ellipse.

This does not invalidate the laws; for when the irregularities are smoothed out it appears that the moon does go around in an ellipse, as the weaving track of a drunken man may carry him on an average straight line. But while the point of beginning and the point of ending are fixed by an irresistible force, the difficulty lies in determining the intermediate points where the Christ's footstep will coincide with the straight line.

The great perturbator of the moon's motion is the sun. When the moon is at "M" in the figure, an eclipse of the sun is possible, but it will only occur in case the moon passes exactly between the center of the sun and the earth, and that happens only at certain times, because generally the inclination of the moon's orbit to that of the earth prevents the moon from getting precisely in line with the sun.

When the moon is at "M" it is nearest the sun, and consequently the pull of the sun upon it is greatest. Observe that the earth is then pulling just the opposite way. When the moon has got to "M-2," where it is farther from the sun, the pull of the latter is less than before, but now the earth is pulling it in a direction nearly at right angles to the sun's pull. And at every instant the forces are changing in amount and direction.

Consider another thing. While the moon is going around the earth the earth is travelling around the sun in the larger curve, so that by the time the moon has moved from "M" to "M-2" the earth has gone from "E" to "E-2."

See if you can work out for yourself what the moon's real path in space must be under the play of the contending attractions of the sun and the earth.

Open Your Eyes.

It will open your eyes to some of the easiest difficulties that the calculator (or rather the inventor of the system of calculation that the calculator employs) has to overcome in trying to predict just where the moon will be with respect to the earth and the sun at any particular second in the future.

Then consider that the moving planets have a slight effect on the moon's motions, and that even the irregularities in the shape of the earth and the moon have to be taken into account, and that all of these causes of perturbation are themselves subject to perturbation, and you will not wonder why an eclipse once a second or two ahead of or behind the schedule.

CAN YOU CONCENTRATE YOUR THOUGHTS AT WILL?

Do your thoughts travel in a circle?

Day after day and year after year your mind runs in the same rut. You choose the easy way and follow the groove.

Why not try to evolve something and get some brain nourishment?

Your mental outfit needs exercise as much as your physical being.

How can you have an active brain if you don't use it?

Exercise is necessary to keep your mind alert and in working order.

Study something every day and try to increase your mental equipment.

It is the mind-laggards who are most apt to lose out in old age—the one who has done more physical than mental work weakens more quickly in mind.

The man who lives by his brains is more likely to keep a level head in old age, because he has always used his brain.
